Dock Strike Clouds Lift As Paralysis Hits Industry

Mediation Official Due for Parley; Halifax Union To Resume Work

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—A waterfront strike had paralyzing effects on the East Coast's industrial life today, but the picture brightened from two directions.

A high Federal mediation official is scheduled to arrive Wednesday to get in touch with striking AFL longshoremen. This could be the first direct outside overture toward settling the strike.

At the same time, Canadian affiliates of the stevedores indicated they would begin work again Wednesday at Halifax, Nova Scotia, docks after announcing a walkout yesterday.

William Margolis, assistant to Cyrus S. Ching, head of the Federal Conciliation and Mediation Service, is due Wednesday in connection with efforts to settle the Maine-to-Virginia walkout.

Margolis, service officials here say, will contact Joseph P. Ryan, head of the striking AFL International Longshoremen's Association.

Will Keep Agreement

Meanwhile, J. J. Campbell, of the AFL Halifax Longshoremen's Association, said his men would "live up to the terms of their agreement with the shipping companies."

He said the union's contract calls "for us to suppy men to all companies who have official duty in Halifax."

(The United Press said that loading and unloading operations on ships diverted to Halifax from strikebound American ports will resume Wednesday morning. It said the first ship to arrive in Halifax as a result of the United States strike, the liner Mauretania, left Halifax Tuesday night for Southampton with almost 600 passengers aboard and that the liner Brittanic is expected to sail Saturday. The back-to-work move of the Halifax waterfront workers may mean that Halifax will be the western port of call for the liners Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth, the UP said.—Editor's Note.)

Paralysis of commercial and industrial areas, meanwhile, grew today along the East Coast.

With ports from Maine to Virginia sealed by the walkout of AFL longshoremen and a far-reaching embargo clamped on export cargo, railroads began laying off employes normally engaged in handling import and export freight.

The week-old strike by members of the AFL International Longshoremen's Association also threatened to shut down several New England woolen mills. It has idled about 2000 truck drivers and helpers in Greater New York, a

Coast Agreement On Hiring Hall Issue Reported

San Francisco, Nov. 16 (AP).—The controversial hiring hall issue, one of the big blocks in the path of maritime peace on the West Coast, appeared today to have been adjusted.

A joint statement by waterfront employers and the CIO longshoremen's union said both sides had agreed to maintain the hiring hall "as is," subject to court or congressional action.

That left wages as the only major question to be settled.

The longshoremen ask a 15-cent hourly pay raise without retroactivity. The prestrike scale was $1.67 an hour.

There was optimistic comment about a strike settlement by Saturday.

The hiring hall dispute was one of the things that touched off the West Coast maritime strike, now in its seventy-sixth day. The union wanted to continue with a union dispatcher. The employers said the Taft-Hartley Act required an impartial dispatcher.

Chinese Reds Retreat East Of Suchow

Nanking, Nov. 16 (AP).—Battle-seasoned Chinese Communist troops have been hurled back east of the vital government base of Suchow in what Nanking hailed today as a major victory.

While independent observation confirmed a Red withdrawal on the east, there were signs that Communist assault to the south threatened to encircle Suchow, which is 700 rail miles northwest of Nanking.

(The Communist radio said Red troops have seized Suining, 48 miles southeast of Suchow. If true, they are less than 60 miles from closing a ring around Suchow.

(Private foreign reports from Nanking reaching Shanghai predicted the government would decide within three days whether to fight on or ask the Communists for terms to end the civil war.

Lengthening Lines Flee

(Foreign business was getting ready for any Communist arrival in Shanghai. Some foreign banks were shifting head offices outside China and quietly advising their employes to leave.)

Despite the government report of victories, thousands of Chinese—many of them officials and their families—were leaving Nanking or packing. Lengthening lines of American, British and other foreign nationals were quitting the capital.

The diplomatic corps met in emergency session. It was reported that the problem of feeding embassy staffs was discussed.

Peace Talks Ruled Out By Blockade, Says Truman

President to Hold Full Review of Situation Monday At White House

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Key West, Fla., Nov. 16.—President Truman today ruled out the possibility of separate four-power peace talks as long as Soviet Russia persists in its blockade of Berlin.

At the same time he disclosed that he will hold a full-scale review of the troubled peace outlook at the White House Monday.

In a press conference in which reporters bombarded him with accumulated questions, he said he had no new plan to send a personal emissary to Moscow to speak with Premier Stalin.

He reiterated once more that he has no intention of visiting Stalin himself, but that the welcome mat will be out at the White House if the Russian leader should choose to visit him to speak of peace.

Secretary of State Marshall and roving ECA Ambassador W. Averell Harriman, Mr. Truman said, will fly to Washington for the important conference. (Harriman arrived in Washington Tuesday.—Editor's note).

Seated under the shade of a large cork tree, with sports-clad reporters clustered about him, Mr. Truman opened up about George Marshall. He made it clear that he wants the former Army Chief of Staff to stay at his post.

They are in perfect agreement on everything, he said, and they always have been. They have discussed all questions, including General Marshall's desire to retire. Marshall never wanted to do anything but retire from the time he left his Army post.

But he is serving as a patriotic duty, the President continued, because he is one of the greatest patriots of the country.

To Discuss Future

They'll talk over his future, too, when they meet in Washington.

It was noon when the President walked out on the big lawn of the commandant's house at this naval submarine base for his first press conference since the election.

In light blue seersucker trousers and open-neck sports shirt, the deeply tanned Chief Executive didn't look like a man who had been through a grueling campaign.

He didn't look like a man who was about to drop his Secretary for Air, either. For W. Stuart Symington came out with him, having been invited over from Miami for lunch. They posed for pictures with Gov. Mon C. Wallgren of Washington.

Wallgren is slated for a high administration post.

While Mr. Truman was pleased to talk about Marshall, he wouldn't talk about Secretary of Defense Forrestal, or about reorganization of the Cabinet.

Mr. Truman began the conference by announcing that he was supporting the Hoover bipartisan Commission on Reorganization of the executive branch of the Government. And he read a copy of a

D. C. Planning Program for Civil Defense

Gen. Young Works On First Steps In Big Project

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

The District government is making plans to establish a broad peacetime civilian defense program along the lines recommended in a national report submitted to Secretary of Defense James C. Forrestal last week.

This was revealed last night by Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner, who has been studying the "Civilian Defense for National Security" for the past four days, in order to plan first steps in adopting it here.

The 300-page program was prepared at the Pentagon by a staff under the direction of Russell J. Hopley, director of the Office of Civilian Defense Planning, and contemplates immediate creation of local atomic defense, medical, air raid warden and other units as part of a civil preparedness program.

On Permanent Basis

The proposed program, which is broader than the wartime project, is to be on a permanent basis. It would provide for reestablishment of the air raid warning systems, with sector and block wardens; appointment of a local director of civil defense, with five deputies; incorporation of city officials in the program; establishment of an evacuation office, relief section, rescue division and air raid spotting service and the designation of a mobile civil defense battalion consisting of 500 uniformed men.

The battalion would include engineers, firefighters, police, medical, radiological defense, chemical defense and rescue workers. At least six planes of the Civil Air Patrol would be included in the battalion.

Auxiliary Police Force

The District Commissioners yesterday considered and then deferred a decision on whether to establish an auxiliary police force, one of the units spelled out in the recommended program.

The Commissioners acted after receiving an opinion from Assistant Corporation Counsel Oliver Gasch on the legality of a proposal by Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett for the establishment of a police reserve unit. The organization would consist of unpaid civilian volunteers for use in aid-

Churchill Always Favored Attack on 'Soft Underbelly'

By Dwight D. Eisenhower

XI

While the summer and fall fighting was in full swing we received word that the President and the Prime Minister and their staffs were preparing to hold another joint meeting, this time near Cairo. Egypt was not then within the limits of our theater, but aside from insuring safe passages through our area we were called upon to provide secure places for preliminary meetings and for the accommodations of individuals.

Mr. Churchill, as always, was entertaining and interesting. I have never met anyone else so capable at keeping a dinner gathering on its toes. His comments on events and personalities were pointed and pungent, often most amusing. He looked forward with great enthusiasm to his meeting with the President, from whom, he said, he always drew inspiration for tackling the problems of war and of the later peace.

He dwelt at length on one of his favorite subjects—the importance of assailing Germany through the "soft underbelly," of keeping up and extending its scope to include much of the northern shore of the Mediterranean. He seemed always to see great and decisive possibilities in the Mediterranean, while the project of invasion across the English Channel left him cold. How often I heard him say, in speaking of Overlord prospects: "We must take care that the tides do not run red with the blood of American and British youth, or the beaches be choked with their bodies."

I could not escape a feeling that Mr. Churchill's views were unconsciously colored by two considerations that lay outside the scope of the immediate military problem. I had nothing tangible to justify such a feeling—I know, though, that I was not alone in wondering occasionally whether these considerations had some weight with him.

The first of them was his concern as a political leader for the future of the Balkans. For this concern I had had great sympathy, but as a soldier I was particularly careful to exclude such considerations from my own recommendations.

The other was an inner compulsion to vindicate his strategical concepts of World War I, in which he had been the principal exponent of the Gallipoli campaign. Many professionals agreed that the Gallipoli affair had failed because of bungling in execution rather than through mistaken calculations of its possibilities. It sometimes seemed that the Prime Minister was determined in the second war to gain public acceptance of this point of view.

I was called upon shortly to go meet the President, who was arriving by ship at Oran. At Oran we transferred Mr. Roosevelt to a plane and took him to a villa on the seashore in Tunisia, which by coincidence was locally known as the "White House." At that time the President seemed in good

Law Officials To Get Auto 'Gouge' Record

U. S., D. C. Agencies Are Expected to Check for Violations

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Full records of the two-day congressional hearings on automobile sales profiteering in Washington will be sent to Federal and District government agencies, Representative W. Kingsland Macy (R., N. Y.) announced yesterday.

Macy, whose House Subcommittee on Questionable Trade Practices conducted the inquiry, said the Federal and District agencies would be expected "to determine whether any violation of law has been uncovered."

Macy called for cooperation by the automobile industry to eliminate practices that he said were used by certain "greedy" dealers to make "exorbitant profits." He left the way open for further hearings, but scheduled none.

"Profitable to U. S."

Another committee member, Representative Henry D. Larcade, jr. (D., La.), in the closing minutes of the hearing said: "I think the work of this committee will prove most profitable to the United States. As a result of this work, thousands and thousands of dollars have been recovered. Since the investigation started, income returns have been amended and thousands of dollars proffered that probably never would have been collected."

In yesterday's hearing, the committee heard new testimony that one way to get quick delivery of new cars in Washington was to give a whopping "tip" to the salesman.

Refuses to Answer

On this point, George E. Adlung, sole salesman for the New York Avenue Motors Co., 606 New York ave. nw., admitted he received and kept for himself $300 to $400 tips on new-car sales to four customers, one of whom said it took five minutes to get his new car. Adlung is the 33-year-old son of William E. Adlung, sole owner of the New York Avenue firm, Washington dealer for Hudson cars. The elder Adlung also appeared as a witness. Son and father testified the latter knew nothing of George's tips until after the House inquiry started.

George, like an earlier witness, refused by advice of Attorney Charles E. Ford to answer a question about how he reported the "tips" on his income tax, saying that he refused on the constitutional ground that the answer might tend to incriminate him.

On Monday, Raymond J. Kearney, partner in the Kearney Oldsmobile Co., 7 New York ave. ne., had dealt with an income-tax question in the same way upon Ford's advice.

Two of Monday's witnesses made dramatic second-day appearances yesterday.

Parents and Neighbors Watch As Young Victims Are Dug Out

Two boys were killed last night when a sand cave collapsed on them on the site of a roadway construction project at 33d pl., about 50 yards north of M st. se. They were John Whalen, 12, of 3232 M st. se., and Francis X. O'Donnell, 10, of 3222 M st. se.

The cave-in was discovered at about 10:15 p. m. and police and fire rescuers rushed to the scene.

They freed the Whalen boy first, at about 10:40 p. m. Ten minutes later, the O'Donnell boy was dug free.

Hoping some spark of life might still be flickering, rescue workers administered oxygen and used pulmotors at the scene.

Finally, at about 11 p. m., the boys were taken in separate ambulances to Casualty Hospital. En route to the hospital and for 30 minutes after their arrival there, the attempt to restore the boys to life continued.

Reluctantly, the rescue workers ceased their efforts after doctors said there was no further hope and pronounced the boys dead.

It was not known at what time the Whalen boy, a sixth grade student at Wallach School, and the O'Donnell boy, a fifth grade student at the Francis Xavier School, were trapped in the cave-in.

The Whalen boy's aunt, Mrs. Nancy Dennis, went out to call him at about 9:45 p. m. There was no answer.

Worried, she returned home and enlisted the aid of her husband, Army Sergt. Floyd Dennis.

When they again left the house to search for the boy, they were joined by William Scates, 21, of 1 Hawaii ave. ne., who was familiar with the neighborhood.

Sergt. Dennis was the first to observe the cave-in. Scates later said he saw a lighted flashlight shining through the ground. Police were called.

Soon congregated at the scene were Rescue Squad No. 1, Fire Department Ambulance No. 1, No. 16 Truck Co., fire department officials, the Fire Department surgeon, Dr. William Claudy, and numerous police officers.

The scene where the boys were trapped was a small cave built during the past two or three weeks by neighborhood youngsters. The cave had been built in the side of a cut made in the earth about a year ago in anticipation of a new roadway.

The boys were covered by soft, sand-like dirt. Because of this, rescuers had difficulty recovering the Whalen boy although he was buried by only a few feet of dirt. The earth continued to crumble as rescuers dug in.

About 50 neighbors gathered at the scene, the heavy silence was broken by the sobbing parents and relatives of the boys who also stood by.

Present were the O'Donnell boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James R. O'Donnell. O'Donell is employed at the White Oaks, Md., Naval Ordnance Laboratory. Also the Whalen boy's mother, Mrs. Gertrude Whalen, who is employed as a District Government telephone operator.

After the bodies had been removed, the O'Donnell boy's father sobbed:

"I told him not to come up here."

Besides his mother, young Whalen is survived by a brother, David, 5.

Francis X. O'Donnell is survived, besides his parents, by a brother, James, 23, a District Health Department ambulance driver, and two sisters, Miss Ann Marie O'Donnell, 18, and Mrs. Dorothy DeVous, 20.

Even after both boys had been taken from the cavein, rescuers continued to dig in the dirt, fearful that still other boys might be trapped.

While they continued to dig, firemen made a house-to-house check of the immediate neighborhood to make certain no others were missing from their homes.

About 11 p. m. the rescue workers were satisfied that no other boys were missing and digging operations were abandoned.

Ambulance Driver Finds Victim Is His Brother

James O'Donnell, Health Department ambulance driver, answered the Fire Department's cave-in report as a matter of habit while cruising around the city in a car on his day off. As he watched rescuers, he suddenly exclaimed: "That's my brother!"

At that point, rescuers were pulling out the body of 10-year-old Francis O'Donnell, after having placed young O'Donnell's chum, John Whalen, under oxygen treatment.

Commissioners Order Suit To Delay Charter Election

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

A lawsuit aimed at blocking the scheduled January 6 charter council election in Montgomery County was ordered yesterday by the County Commissioners.

If the suit is successful, county voters who adopted the council-manager form of government provided by charter will have to wait until 1950 before selecting the first elected "home rule" charter council.

The action was ordered by the commissioners in a five-minute executive session after the move was proposed behind closed doors by F. Barnard Welsh, a Republican leader and legal counsel to the county board.

Welsh said his suit is expected to name the Board of Elections Supervisors as defendants, and will be filed in Montgomery County Circuit Court "within a week."

It would be based on a section of the Maryland Constitution which provides that county officers shall be elected only at four-year intervals.

The last election for county offices was in 1946. Voters cannot legally go to the polls to elect any county official until 1950, Welsh contended.

Should an injunction be granted against the January election, observers pointed out, the present commissioners would sit as "councilmen" and administer the charter, with limitations, until 1950. Major changes proposed in the charter such as hiring of a county manager and establishment of de-

'Sandbagging' Charge Denied By Wallace at ABC Hearing

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

Police Pvt. Samuel E. Wallace yesterday calmly denied he had told a fellow officer that he had "sandbagged" Mitchell's Grill, 235 G st. nw., in bringing 57 charges of liquor law violation against the cafe.

Wallace's denial was made as he testified at an Alcoholic Beverage Control Board hearing into the alleged violations.

His testimony was in direct contradiction to that given last week by Police Pvt. Frank N. Manthos, who told the board Wallace had admitted "sandbagging" (framing) the grill, during a conversation with him in front of Keith's Theater, 15th and G sts. nw., November 5.

"Manthos and I had a pretty warm conversation," Wallace testified. "He asked what I thought of the case and told me I was 'hurting' myself at No. 1 Precinct." (Wallace was then a vice squad undercover man. He has since been shifted to No. 4 Precinct in uniform.)

Wallace continued: "I said I didn't give a damn whose toes I stepped on, that I was responsible to Lieutenant Blick." The witness stressed that he had been assigned to investigate the cafe and was doing his duty in preferring the charges.

"Did you say anything about sandbagging?" Prosecutor Robert D. Wise inquired.

"No, sir."

Post Story Wins '48 Real Estate News Award

By a Post Reporter

New York, Nov. 16.—A Washington Post story explaining the skyrocketing cost of home construction between 1940 and 1948 in the Washington area was awarded first prize tonight as "best real estate news feature of 1948 in America."

The award was made by the National Association of Real Estate Editors at a luncheon at the Advertising Club. Conrad P. Harness, real estate writer for The Washington Post, was author of the winning story.

The story which appeared last August, told of zooming costs at East Pines, a project of single homes in East Riverdale, Md., built by Standard Properties, Inc. Although the prewar and postwar homes were of identical size, costs shot up in the eight-year period from $3800 to $9200. The story gave a cost break-down, item for item.

brought to the witness table a little black book—an old surety company diary. On the page reserved for Christmas Day of 1940 appeared the penciled date "1948" and under it a list of 10 tips totaling $1420 Manuel said he had received.

There were two for $500, one listed as coming from "Fox" whom Manuel identified as Ben J. Cohn. The latter on Monday had identified himself as a "bookmaker" and told about passing a $500 tip to Manuel from Carl Mehrstedt, bartender of 1336 Spring rd. nw.

The other $500 was listed as coming from Harry Snider. The latter, a restaurant operator of 2025 Fendall st. se., had told on Monday of making the payment to Manuel.

Manuel paved the way for a return trip by Snider to the witness chair. The salesman said that right after Snider bought the car he took it up on Rhode Island ave. and sold it. The committee sent Manuel out to get the details and bring them back to the afternoon session. He then reported that the Snider car was sold to Leeds Motor Co., not on Rhode Island ave., but at 5120 Wisconsin ave. nw., and "I don't know the price but I presume it was sold at a profit.

Snider, back on the stand, said he had bought the car for a friend, Robert Zaneville, and the latter had sold it the next day.

Snider also told the committee that Monday night, after testifying, he received mysterious telephone calls at his restaurant from persons whose voices he did not recognize.

"All they said was why had I yak-yaked so much," Snider reported. He add he had hung up.

"The intent was to discourage you from talking?" asked Macy.

"That's right, sir," Snider replied.

Witness Protests

One witness, Earle O. Baker, president of the Washington Automotive Trade Association, sharply protested that the subcommittee had singled out Washington auto dealers for its inquiry. He said he did not condone "tips": "I certainly do not approve of that type of business in any way."

"The satisfied customers are silent," he said. "The dissatisfied are a noisy minority."

"Voteless D. C. Dealers"

Baker declared:

"It is also to be noted that the voteless District of Columbia dealers were singled out to be used as guinea pigs; and the results projected on a national basis much after the manner of the recent election polls which are now in such ill repute."

To this Chairman Macy countered that it was "out of order and a little deplorable" to suggest that the committee went to work on Washington dealers because they had no vote. He said the fact that the committee got more complaints about the auto business than any other, and lacking funds, took Washington as a representative area.

"As far as I know, the trade association has not aided the committee in developing this testimony," said Macy.

Macy stated, "the record will speak for itself. Your association and others had the opportunity to go into these things before we were drawn in."

Baker said it was difficult for the association to correct practices of individual dealers.

Industry Testimony

A second industry spokesman, N. K. Vanderzee, sales manager of the Hudson Motor Car Co., Detroit, Mich., said he did not believe the testimony about Washington auto sales "is typical of the average dealers—I definitely do not consider it typical of Hudson dealers."

He said his firm was interested in securing public good will, and in seeing that all Hudson dealers follow a policy of charging fair and equitable prices, of delivering cars to customers in sequence, of making no distinction between sales with a trade-in and those without one, of seeing that customers get cars equipped the way they want them, and giving a fair allowance on used cars.

He said that since 1947 his firm had sought to police its field, and had threatened "appropriate" action where dealers failed to follow sales policies of the Hudson firm. He said "we shall give our attention to the evidence and the suggestions of the committee."

Committee Counsel John T. M. Reddan asked what the firm did to dealers that did not follow the Hudson sales policies.

"If we can find legal grounds to end the contract, we get rid of the dealers," said Venderzee.

In his closing statement, Chairman Macy declared:

"It is by no means our contention that the dealers are not entitled to a fair profit. But we do contend that the profits made by some dealers go far beyond this point, and that the methods through which this profit is obtained go beyond what can be termed ethical business practices.

"It would be deplorable if the greed and avarice of a few dealers and the lack of an effective program on the part of the manufacturers should catapult an entire basic industry of the country into disrepute and even the possibility of controls.

Macy told newsmen that the hearing record would go to the offices of Attorney General Tom C. Clark, Internal Revenue Commissioner George J. Schoeneman, and District Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West. It is also expected to reach the office of George Morris Fay, United States Attorney for the District, via the Justice Department.

Counsel Reddan said the Justice Department would be asked to examine the record to determine whether there had been any conspiracy to submit false information to the committee.

Reddan said such an offense would be a felony and a spokesman for the district attorney's office said that the conspiracy feature carries a maximum penalty of two years in jail and/or a $10,000 fine.

Macy declared "to date we have shown only a few of the methods employed by certain automobile dealers to obtain exorbitant profits. It is our intention to present other types of operations as the time and facilities of the committee permit."

First witness to testify yesterday about a tip to the younger Adlung was Arthur J. McCarrick, 2051 S. 12th st., Arlington, employed in the Federal Housing Administration. He said that in June he paid George Adlung $300 over the invoice price of $2436 for a new Hudson.

McCarrick said he had made the $300 "bonus payment" to George Adlung in the New York ave. company showroom, after discussing it with his wife.

Joshua Mitchell, of 600 Q st. nw., who is learning how to be a tailor at Martha Washington High School, under the GI bill, and also working part time as a porter in a club, said he paid $350 more than the invoice price for a new Hudson in February. He testified he made the payment to George Adlung. He said he is still making monthly payments of $90.48 on the car, under a 24-month payment program.

Myer A. Raskin, 2337 15th st. ne., a grocer, said he paid $400 more than the invoice price to George Adlung for a new Hudson in July. He said that after looking at the prices of "new used cars" he thought the payment was "a happy medium."

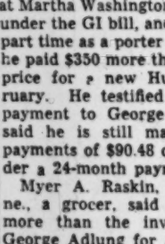
Raskin, under questioning, admitted he had talked to George Adlung about the investigation after it started. He said he asked Adlung if the price on his car had been $2789—the invoice price that did not show the $400 "tip."

On questions from Reddan, Raskin admitted that his first word to the committee investigators was that he had paid just the invoice price for the car.

"When did you tell them the truth?" asked Reddan.

"When they tripped me up," replied Raskin.

Albert Brodsky, in the drugstore business with his brother at 11th and N sts. nw., said he paid about $3100 or $3200 for a new Hudson last May, and of the total about $400 was a payment to George Adlung over the invoice price.



Brodsky

'Bookkeeping Mistake'

"I bought the car in five minutes," he said.

He added that he paid for some extras that he did not get.

Frederick B. Reeves, gas station operator of 322 Division ave. ne., said he had traded in an old car to get a new one from George Adlung this year. Reddan brought out later that Adlung failed to report the tradein when he filed papers with the committee. Adlung said the failure was a "bookkeeping mistake."

Reddan centered much of his questioning of George Adlung on the latter's failure to report anything but the invoice price on cars the buyers of which later testified they had added "bonus" payments.

Reddan asked George Adlung whether he made the required weekly reports to the District Director of Vehicles and Traffic on his used car transcations.

"No sir," said George Adlung.

"You ought to get yourself a copy of the regulations," Reddan said.

George Adlung testified that he had been accepting tips since the first of the year, and had not accepted tips in 1947. He said he started the policy of taking tips because the practice seemed to be prevalent among auto salesmen. He said he "wouldn't care to guess" how many tips he had received this year.

Reddan asked whether he had discontinued the policy of taking tips on a temporary or a permanent basis.

"Permanent," replied George Adlung.

He said he had not originally reported to the committee about the overpayments on his new-car sales because "I considered them personal tips to me."

George Adlung testified that this year he made a personal profit of $867 on the sale of a demonstrator Hudson he had bought personally six months earlier. He said his father turned a similar profit of about $774 on a demonstrator.

George's father, called to the stand for a second time, said it was not the policy of his firm to sell cars for "premium" payments, and that he had no knowledge of the tips until George told him after the subpenas arrived.

Title Transfer Handling Here Investigated in Car Deals

By Jean Reiff
Post Reporter

District officials yesterday launched an investigation which could lead to the prosecution of some figures in the trade-in automobile deals now under congressional investigation.

Traffic Director George E. Keneipp asked for a police investigation based on testimony before a House subcommittee that automobile certificates of titles were handled improperly in the deals.

Police Chief Robert J. Barrett said his department will investigate the possibility of violations if the subcommittee deems it proper at this time.

Corporation Counsel Vernon West said his office has already begun a study of the testimony to determine if violations exist and if there are enough grounds to prosecute.

According to a number of witnesses, several car owners traded in their autos to new car dealers and signed the certificate of transfer of title in blank. The new car dealers in turn sold the autos to used-car dealers without putting their own names on the certificates. The use-car dealers allowed their names to be placed in the blanks as though they had dealt directly with the original owners.

By such actions, the car owners, the new-car dealers and the used-car dealers all violated Section 6 of the District Vehicle Title and Registration Regulations, officials agreed.

The maximum penalty for this violation is a $300 fine or 10 days' imprisonment or both.

The regulations provide that the disposer of a vehicle must "assign, execute and deliver" to the acquirer, a certificate of title "duly assigned," and that the acquirer must obtain this certificate within 96 hours.

Under this regulation, the names of the car owner and the new-car dealer, to whom he turned over the auto, should both have appeared on the certificate's assignment of title before the transaction was notarized, according to the corporation counsel's office.

The names of the new-car dealer and the used-car dealer, who finally purchased the auto, then should both have appeared on the certificate's "reassignment of title before that transaction was notarized," the corporation counsel's office explained.

District officials said the only apparent reason for handling the certificates in blank was to omit any record of the new-car dealers handling the car.

Local officials said they will not investigate the income tax phase of the transactions, since it must be handled through the Baltimore office of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

District officials also are investigating testimony that some new car dealers have failed to make weekly reports to the traffic department on the number of cars they handle—a violation of the Title and Registration Regulations, which also carries a maximum penalty of a $300 fine or 10 days' imprisonment or both.

Keneipp said he will send out letters this week to car dealers warning them that they can be prosecuted for this violation, but he added he has no way of checking up on them.

The corporation counsel's office pointed out that if it brings charges that certificates of title were handled improperly, the cases may be difficult to prosecute in court.

The complaining witnesses would be the original car owners, who could refuse to testify on the grounds they might incriminate themselves, West said.

Their testimony about the certificates of title, given at the congressional hearings, could not be used in a court trial, because the accused has the constitutional right to be confronted by his accusers and to cross-examine them, West said.

He emphasized, however, that the corporation counsel's office cannot grant immunity to the complainant in return for his testimony.

United States Attorney George Morris Fay said he will not begin any probe unless the House subcommittee requests an investigation of perjury by the witnesses or of a possible conspiracy to make false reports. The violations of the title and registration regulations are a District government problem and must be handled by the corporation counsel's office, he said.

Publishers Offer Capital Printers 10-Cent Increase

Washington newspaper publishers yesterday offered to boost wages of their AFL printers by 10 cents an hour.

A spokesman for the Washington Publishers Association said it was the first wage offer made in current negotiations.

James J. O'Connor, president of Columbia Typographical Union No. 101, representing some 650 printers on Washington newspapers, announced that management's proposal is being "considered" but "in my opinion it is not acceptable."

Talks will be resumed at 2:15 p. m. today at 1317 F st. nw.

Inmate, 40, Dies As 23d Workhouse Term Nears End

Otto Gilliams, 40, of 1617 13th st. ne., died yesterday at the District Workhouse at Occoquan, five days before has was to complete his twenty-third term there since 1936.

Donald Clemmer, director of the District Department of Correction, said Gilliams, serving a 25-day sentence for drunkenness, was found dead in a workhouse dormitory. Death apparently was from natural causes, Clemmer said.

Gilliams was last sentenced November 1. Most of this previous sentences, records showed, also were for drunkenness.

Engineers to Hear Talk on Airplane Relay of Television

Progress in beaming television programs from high-flying airplanes will be discussed at 8 p. m. today at a meeting of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, in the Pepco auditorium.

Guest speaker will be C. E. Nobles, 30-year-old Westinghouse engineer who originated the stratovision system. He will explain electronic and aeronautical developments and test results of experimental flight broadcasts made jointly by Westinghouse and the Glenn L. Martin Co. since 1945.

Slides and motion pictures will be used to illustrate technical aspects of the system designed to bring television service to the rural areas normally beyond the range of ground stations.

Ford Official Tells Of Warning Dealers

Richmond, Va., Nov. 16 (AP).—John R. Davis, vice president of the Ford Motor Co., said today car manufacturers should make it plain to dealers that "unfair practices" will not be tolerated.

Davis addressed the Automotive Trade Association of Virginia at its convention here.

He also said factories cannot exercise outright control of dealers. Both branches of the industry must approach the problem together, he added.

The Ford Co., Davis said, has warned since V-J Day against excessive sales of accessories, undervaluation of trade-ins, and premiums added to new car prices—the practices which the Macy Committee in Congress investigated.

He reported that 23 Ford dealerships have been canceled or suspended. The company has more than 7000 dealers over the country, he added.

Davis said he was not giving a blanket indorsement to the Macy investigation.

Koo Asks Statement Of U. S. China Policy

By John M. Hightower
Associated Press Staff Writer

Chinese Ambassador Wellington Koo disclosed yesterday that he has asked the State Department on behalf of his government for a declaration of American policy on China in the present crisis.

Koo told a reporter that he had transmitted to the State Department the "desires" of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek for a policy statement, asserting that his government simply does not know what United States policy is.

What is wanted, he added, is a declaration of "sympathy, solidarity and support" for Chiang's Nationalist regime which recently has suffered critical defeat at the hands of the Communist forces in Manchuria and North China. An American statement of the kind his government wants, Koo said, would help to raise morale of the people and armies of Nationalist China in their struggle with the Communists.

China figured in two developments at the State Departmant yesterday. Britisr Ambassador Sir Oliver Franks, after a lengthy conference with Undersecretary of State Robert Lovett, said that Lovett and he had discussed China and Berlin and had tried to get at the facts concerning the crisis between the western world and the Communists in each place.

About the same time, the department announced that Ambassador J. Leighton Stuart, American envoy to Chiang Kai-shek, had canceled plans to come to the United States in about 10 days to address a meeting of the Federal Council of Churches. Press Officer Michael McDermott said Stuart decided to remain at his post "in view of the present uncertainties of the situation in China."

Behind such diplomatic wordage, officials here consider the Chinese situation extremely serious and feel strongly that it is not in the interest of the United States to let China go Communist if that can be avoided.

Parliament Congratulates Royal Family

London, Nov. 16 (NYHT).—Parliament adopted unanimously today resolutions congratulating the royal family on the birth of Princess Elizabeth's son.

In both the House of Commons and the House of Lords, the adoption of the traditional "humble address" of congratulation provided the setting for fulsome tributes to the royal family.

Both the princess and her baby, born Sunday night at Buckingham Palace, were reported by her doctors today to be making satisfactory progress.

The prince still has not been named.

Daily Worker Declares Prince May Lose Title

London, Nov. 16 (AP).—The Communist Daily Worker said today that Princess Elizabeth's new son may have to "shed his title" and may even become a trade union member.

The Daily Worker, which carried no news stories concerning the birth of the two-day-old prince, published a page one editorial headlined "That Baby."

Chinese Reds Hurled Back

The U. S. Embassy began evacuating embassy dependents.

[American consular authorities extended their evacuation warnings to include American citizens in virtually all parts of China, a correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune reported—Editor's note.]

The Military News Agency asserted that nine of Gen. Chen Yi's veteran Communist columns were retreating toward Taierhchuang, 35 miles northeast of Suchow, after taking a beating from government tanks.

(The Communist raido version was that nearly half the tanks were destroyed and the government suffered "several thousand casualties.")

Associated Press Photographer Jack Hogan, flying over the scene, confirmed a Red withdrawal and said the heaviest fighting was raging at Paichi, 30 miles east of Suchow. The government said the Communists were retreating in the Paichi area.

Hogan could find no evidence of fighting closer than 15 miles to Suchow, whereas 24 hours earlier the Communists had been threatening the airport only five miles east of the city.

Hogan said from the air it appeared the Communists held at least 30 miles of the railway south of Suchow. It is over this railway from Nanking that the government is trying to bring up reinforcements.

He found Communist activity as far south as Laian, only 35 miles northwest of Nanking, where four large fires were burning.

Airway Strike Ends

London, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—A six-day strike over a new bonus plan at Northolt Airport here, which tied up 50 daily flights operated by British European Airways, ended today. At a mass meeting, nearly 1000 striking service engineers decided to return to work at once.

New Species Held Traced

Berkeley, Calif., Nov. 16 (AP).—A cell substance never before suspected of playing a part in evolution may be responsible for the sudden origin of new species, Dr. Richard Goldschmidt, zoologist, reported today.

This material also may play a dominant role in determining the sex of individuals, Dr. Goldschmidt told the National Academy of Sciences.

He said it can cause a leg to grow on a fruit fly in the place where a wing should be. It can make the left side of an insect female and the right side male.

Thus far its effects have been observed only on insects and worms. But it exists in the cells of all living things.

This tricky stuff is called heterochromatin. It is one of the two principal materials of which chromosomes, the hereditary agents of all living cells, are made. The other principal material is euchromatin.

The euchromatin is the material containing the genes, which most scientists believe are potent little specks of matter in chromosomes that transmit hereditary characteristics from cell to cell during their growth and division.

health and was optimistic and confident. He stayed over an extra day in Tunisia to visit battlefields of that area.

Roosevelt Speculates On Old Battlefields

While traveling through them he speculated upon the possible identity of our battlefields with those of ancient days, particularly with that of Zama. So far as either the President or I knew, that battlefield had never been positively identified by historians, but we were certain, because of the use of elephants by the Carthaginians, that it was located on the level plains rather than in the mountains, where so much of our own fighting took place. The President's liking for history and his ffequent reference to it always gave an added flavor to conversation with him on military subjects. The same was true of George Patton and the Prime Minister.

I wandered off to inspect some burnt-out tanks while the President and his Wac driver had their lunch. When I returned he remarked, "Ike, if, one year ago, you had offered to bet that on this day the President of the United States would be having his lunch on a Tunisian roadside, what odds could you have demanded?"

This thought apparently directed his mind to the extraordinary events of the year just past. He told me, first, what a disappointment it had been to him that our African invasion came just after, instead of just before, the 1942 elections. He spoke of Darlan, of Boisson and Giraud. He talked of Italy and Mussolini and of the uneasiness he had felt during the Kasserine affair. He told of instances of disagreement with Mr. Churchill, but earnestly and almost emotionally said, "No one could have a better or sturdier ally than that old Tory!"

Mr. Roosevelt seemed to be enjoying himself sincerely, but his reminiscences were interrupted by a Secret Service man who approached to say, "Mr. President, we've been here longer than I like. We should go on now." The President grinned and said to me, "You are lucky you don't have the number of bosses I have."

To give General Marshall and Admiral King some release from the restrictions that inevitably accompany travel with a presidential party I invited the two of them to stay at my little cottage in Carthage. Both were outspokenly delighted to have the opportunity for a quiet evening, and both seemed to me to be in splendid health and spirits. In a before-dinner conversation Admiral King brought up the subject of future command of Overlord.

Churchill Promised Command to Brooke

He said that in early discussions between the President and the Prime Minister it had apparently been agreed that a British officer would be named to the post, possibly because an American was already commanding in the Mediterranean. Later, when the President came to realize that American strength in Overlord would eventually predominate over British, he decided that public opinion would demand an American commander. He so informed the Prime Minister, who agreed although the agreement cost him some personal embarrassment because he had already promised Alan Brooke the command.

At the same time the President had suggested to Mr. Churchill that acceptance of this arrangement would logically throw the Mediterranean command to the British, where British Empire forces would be expected to provide the bulk of the ground and naval strength. The President had tentatively decided, King said, to give the Overlord command to Marshall, against the urgent and persistent advice of King and others who dreaded the consequences of Marshall's withdrawal from the Combined Chiefs of Staff.

COMMANDERS IN CHIEF—En route to the history-making conferences at Cairo and Tehran, the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt made a stopover to decorate General Eisenhower in North Africa. "Ike," then commander in chief of the Allied forces in North Africa, received the Legion of Merit Medal

While the Prime Minister had spoken of this matter a few days earlier at Malta, this was the first time I had heard any American discuss the Overlord command, except on the basis of rumor and speculation. Admiral King's story agreed in such exact detail with what the Prime Minister had told me that I accepted it as almost official notice that I would soon be giving up field command to return to Washington.

Attitude Reflected Interest of Public

On the morning following my talk with Admiral King, the President spoke briefly to me about the future Overlord command and I came to realize finally that it was a point of intense official and public interest back home. He did not give me a hint as to his final decision except to say that he dreaded the thought of losing Marshall from Washington. But he added, "You and I know the name of the Chief of Staff in the Civil War, but few Americans outside the professional services do."

He then added, as if thinking aloud, "But it is dangerous to monkey with a winning team." I answered nothing except to state I would do my best wherever the Government might find use for me.

On the second day the President and his party departed for Cairo, leaving personal orders with me to join the conference in that city within two or three days. Accompanied by my principal commanders, except for Alexander, who was ill, we proceeded to Cairo to present our views concerning the forces in the Mediterranean.

So far as there was discernible any difference between the professional views of the British and American groups it appeared to me and to my associates at the Cairo Conference that the British still favored a vigorous and all-out prosecution of the Mediterranean campaign even, if necessary, at the expense of additional delay in launching Overlord; while the Americans declined to approve anything that would detract from the strength of the attack to be delivered across the Channel early in the following summer.

The Prime Minister and some of his chief military advisers still looked upon the Overlord plan with scarcely concealed misgivings; their attitude seemed to be that we could avoid the additional and grave risks implicit in a new amphibious operation by merely pouring into the Mediterranean all the air, ground, and naval resources available. They implied that by pushing the Italian campaign, invading Yugoslavia, capturing Crete, the Dodecanese, and Greece, we would deal the Germans a serious blow without encountering the admitted dangers of the full-out effort against northwest Europe.

Staff Still Favored Cross-Channel Attack

My own staff, including its British members, and I continued to support the conclusions reached a year and a half previously that only in the cross-Channel attack would our full strength be concentrated and decisive results achieved.

However, I never at any time heard Mr. Churchill urge or suggest complete abandonment of the Overlord plan. His conviction, so far as I could interpret it, was that at some time in the indefinite future the Allies would have to cross the Channel. But he seemed to believe that our attack should be pushed elsewhere until the day came when the enemy would be forced to withdraw most of his troops from northwest Europe, at which time the Allies could go in easily and safely.

My own recommendation, then as always, was that no operation should be undertaken in the Mediterranean except as a directly supporting move for the Channel attack and that our planned redeployment to England should proceed with all possible speed. Obviously a sufficient strength had to be kept in the Mediterranean to hold what we had already gained and to force the Nazis to maintain sizable forces in that area.

This was the program adopted by the Cairo Conference, and our shipment of troops and equipment to England continued with[out] abatement. The psychological value of the capture of Rome was, however, emphasized to us, particularly by the Prime Minister.

Again I had an opportunity for private talks with the President, at one of which he informally presented me with the Legion of Merit. His conversation revolved more around postwar problems than those of immediate operations. He gave me his ideas on the post-hostilities occupation of Germany and listened sympathetically to my contention that occupation should become a responsibility of civil agencies of government as soon as the exigencies of war might permit.

He mentioned domestic politics only to say that, much as he'd like to go back to private life, it looked as if he'd have to stand again for the Presidency.

One evening General Marshall asked me with some others to dinner. It was a splendid American dinner with turkey and all that goes with it. As the guests were leaving, one said to General Marshall, "Thank you very much for a fine Thanksgiving dinner." I turned around in complete astonishment and said, "Well, that shows what war does to a man. I had no idea this was Thanksgiving Day."

In December, 1943, General Eisenhower flew to Tunis from Italy to see President Roosevelt, who was on his way home from the Cairo Conference, and was told for the first time that he was to command "Overlord," the great cross-Channel invasion of Europe.

How this decision was reached described in the twelfth installment of "Crusade in Europe" which will be published in this newspaper tomorrow. General Eisenhower also describes the strategy of the Anzio landing in Italy and Prime Minister Churchill's determination to carry it out in spite of warnings that it was a risky affair.

This is a condensed serialization of Dwight D. Eisenhower's "Crusade in Europe." It contains highlights of the book to be published November 22, 1948, by Doubleday & Co. Copyrighted by Doubleday & Co., Inc.

U. N. Armistice Order Issued

Paris, Nov. 16 (AP).—The Security Council today ordered Arabs and Jews to negotiate an armistice immediately as a step to peace.

The acting United Nations mediator, Dr. Ralph Bunche, said he would ask the Jews and Arabs to begin talks at once.

The 11-nation Council sought to replace the Palestine truce, in existence since July and broken by one side or the other several times, with a more durable armistice.

Considerable confusion arose among Security Council members over the technical differences between a truce and an armistice. Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton of Canada said a truce is something which can be imposed by an order to stop fighting. An armistice is a mutual agreement between parties. In general, also, a truce is more of a temporary arrangement.

'Only Matter of Words'

Jacob A. Malik, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister, declared, however, that the difference is only a matter of words.

Egyptian and Lebanese representatives told the Council they would not negotiate directly with the Jews for an armistice. To do so, they said, would be to imply recognition of the Jewish state, which they refuse to do.

Aubrey S. Eban of Israel said his country was willing to negotiate an armistice, as always. But he objected to this particular resolution, because it contained a section reiterating the Council's demand of November 4 that the Jews withdraw from the Negev Desert in southern Palestine and leave the demilitarized area under U. N. control.

Resolution by Canada

Canada submitted the armistice resolution with the support of Belgium and Canada. In a paragraph by paragraph vote, Russia and the Soviet Ukraine abstained. Syria abstained on some sections, opposed others. The other eight Council members, including the United States, supported it.

The resolution said an armstice would "facilitiate the transition from the present truce to permanent peace."

It provides for the parties to negotiate on delineation of permanent armistice demarcation lines beyond which Arab and Israeli forces may not advance, and for such withdrawal and reduction of armed forces as will insure maintenance of the armistice during the transition to permanent peace.

The Assembly's Budget Committee approved a $29,500,000 relief program for 500,000 Arab refugees.

All Arabs Declared To Oppose Armistice

Cairo, Egypt, Nov. 16 (AP).—Premier Mahmoud Fahmy Nokrashy Pasha said tonight "all Arab countries are against an armistice in Palestine."

He said he had not yet received the Security Council's armistice order.

Truman, Russians Refuse to Budge

letter he had sent former President Herbert C. Hoover.

And then the questions started.

Everyone wanted to know about the suggestion of Secretary-General Lie of the United Nations and President Evatt of its General Assembly that the four big powers resume negotiations to end the blockade of Berlin.

The President didn't hesitate on that one. He said Secretary of State Marshall has drafted a reply which he has approved and that he will make it public later.

But, he said, the United States position hasn't changed. We won't resume negotiations with Russia, France and Great Britain on Germany until the Soviet government lifts its blockade of Berlin.

The President talked like he did during the campaign when the question of additional emergency aid to China came up. Senator Bridges, (R., N. H.) has suggested a special session of Congress on that one.

There will be no special session of the do-nothing Eightieth Congress, the President said.

He'll take his program to the Democratic Congress in January, he made clear, and it will be the Democratic platform and the 21-point domestic program he first outlined to Congress September 6, 1945.

He did have a new name for his program as a substitute for "New Deal."

His program is the same as it has always been, he said.

He'll ask for civil rights laws and repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act and the rest of the program for which he campaigned in his state-of-the-union message.

The Taft-Hartley Act will be repealed, if he has his way, but the mechanics have not been worked out. The Taft-Hartley Act amended the Wagner Labor Relations Act, but actually became a virtual substitute for it. Some new law on labor relations probably will have to be worked out on the basis of recommendations he made in his state-of-the-union message of 1947.

As for China, and Bridges' suggestion, the President said the Administration is in communication now with Chiang Kai-shek, President of China. About 112 million dollars of the money appropriated to aid the Chinese government has been spent.

The President wouldn't talk taxes.

A reporter wanted to know if it would be safe to assume he would seek excess profits taxes in January again. The President recalled recent assumptions by some of the correspondents—apparently referring to election forecasts—and suggested it would be safer to wait for his budget message to Congress.

As for the state of the union message, he proposed to carry out the Democratic platform to the best of his ability.

He and Senator Alben W. Barkley, the Vice President-elect, he said, are in complete agreement. This came when some one wanted to know how Barkley would fit into the partnership idea Gov. Thomas E. Dewey defeated GOP presidential nominee, had advanced for Gov. Earl Warren, his running mate.

Mr. Truman said no President and Vice President were ever closer than he and Senator Barkley.

The President said he weighs 173 or 174 pounds—bedside, that is. This would be about six pounds more than he weighed when he followed the fallen Roosevelt into the White House, but about five pounds under his top weight since.

The whole White House staff turned out for the conference. And Margaret, the President's daughter, looked on. She had on blue shorts, and a red-and-white checked blouse. Her hair was gathered into a red ribbon.

3 Governors Agree 90% on West Germany

Frankfurt, Germany, Nov. 16 (AP).—Three Western military governors reached "90 per cent agreement" today on an occupation statute for western Germany. It is generally considered as a sort of interim peace treaty with the three Western zones.

This was reported by Gen. Lucius D. Clay, the American military governor, after a six-hour conference with Gen. Sir Brian Robertson and Lieut. Gen. Pierre Koenig, the British and French governors.

The occupation statute will define the powers of the proposed west German state in relation to the occupation authorities.

Clay said the three military governors reached many points of agreement on three-power controls which would still be in effect after a west German government is set up.

'Sense of Security'

Arms Called Recovery Aid By Harriman

By Ferdinand Kuhn, jr.
Post Reporter

Western Europe will recover faster if it strengthens its military defenses, special Ambassador W. Averell Harriman said yesterday on his return from six months at his post in Paris.

Harriman told a packed press conference that the western European nations neded a sense of greater security, and that rearmament would help provide it. He was confident that some of the European countries had enough "slack" in their economies to afford to keep stronger military establishments.

He had "no comment whatsoever" when he was asked about the possibility of his succeeding Gen. George C. Marshall as Secretary of State.

Speculation Heightened

Speculation about his appointment was vastly heightened yesterday when President Truman said at Key West that he would see both Marshall and Harriman at the White House Monday.

But Harriman brushed questions aside by saying that he expected his White House talk to concern the Economic Cooperation Administration and developments in Europe.

"I'm hard at work at my job," he said, "and I haven't anything else in mind."

He told reporters that the fear of war was deep in the minds of European peoples, although there was less discussion of the subject than here.

"Fear of war is one of the considered ways in which the Kremlin is trying to retard European recovery," he reminded his questioners. "Personally I'm not fearful of war in the foreseeable future"—but he quickly added that he didn't know exactly what "foreseeable" might mean.

Coal Strike Cited

He also said the recent coal strike in France was part of the Kremlin's deliberate effort to fight the Marshall Plan, working through Communist-dominated trade unions.

"But the Communists have failed in France as they have failed in other efforts of the same kind he said. "It will be costly to France to lose so much coal, but in the light of the whole program it's a relatively minor setback.

"The important thing is that the Communists failed to flood the coal mines, which would have set back the coal production for many months."

Like ECA Administrator Paul Hoffman, who visited Europe last month, Harriman brought back a glowing report of European progress as a result of the Marshall Plan.

He cited a 20 per cent increase in steel production and a 40 per cent increase in cereal grain crops in the Marshall Plan countries compared to last year. He told of "substantial progress" in intra-European cooperation, and of trade beginning to expand again as a result of the new payments plan which enables the European countries to buy what they need from one another.

Program Held Justified

He found "a spirit of enthusiasm in the international staff of the 19-nation Organization for European Economic Cooperation in Paris, and he thought this indicative of "real results."

His conclusion was that the Europeans had done enough in the first year of ECA to justify continuing the program for a second year.

Harriman said he planned to stay about two weeks helping ECA officials here prepare the presentation of their case to the new Congress. Present plans are to make two requests—first for about $1,200,000,000 to carry the program through from April 1 to June 30 and then for an estimated $4,500,000,000 for the second fiscal year beginning July 1.

Aircraft Industry Held Adequate To Meet Demands

American aircraft manufacturers can build all the military planes needed by this country in the next two years and still expand their export business, the Aircraft Industries Association said yesterday.

Reporting on a survey of 22 principal plane manufacturers, it said that only one firm plans to decrease export sales promotion. Nine said they intend to increase foreign sales activity and 12 expect to carry on the same amount as in the past.

Maj. Gen. Oliver P. Echols, association president, said the present military production program will reach its peak in 1950, but even then the annual rate will be only a little more than half the monthly production during 1944. Less than 2500 military planes will be produced this year.

Part of Truman '45 Program Already Law

By The Associated Press

Congress already has acted on several of the recommendations in the 21-point program of domestic legislation which President Truman first presented in 1945 and which he said yesterday will be pressed in his second Administration.

These include a pay raise for the lawmakers, laws to help veterans make the transition from military to civilian life, and a peacetime draft.

Others, however, have not been acted upon. Among these are some items which the President turned into political capital during his successful election campaign, including a "broad and comprehensive" housing law, and a raise in the minimum wage above its present level of 40 cents an hour.

Other principal points included: Increased unemployment compensation, price control, permanent authority to reorganize Government agencies, fair employment practices legislation, a strengthened Labor Department, Federal control of the employment service for at least two years, farm price supports, a Federal research agency, a tax bill which "must not lose sight of the budgetary situation."

Peace Talks Plea Appears Doomed

City Officials

Russ Force Berlin Split By Firing 2

Berlin, Nov. 16 (NYHT).—The cleavage between East and West in Berlin became substantially deeper today when the American military government categorically refused to countenance a Soviet order to dismiss from their posts two members of the City Council.

The two men are Ernest Reuter, head of the traffic and utilities department, who was dismissed by the Russians yesterday, and Gustav Klingelhofer, head of the economics department, dismissed today.

The orders were called invalid by Col. Frank L. Howley, commandant of the American sector, who added that they constituted "further proof that the splitting of Berlin is being forced by the Russians."

The two officials, he pointed out, were duly elected and were approved by the Russians as well as by the western powers. They cannot be removed from their jobs, under existing agreements, without four-power concurrence.

It is not Reuter's first brush with the Russians. Elected mayor of Berlin two years ago, he was never permitted to take the post because the Russians objected to his politics. He is a member of the Social Democratic Party, largest in Berlin.

Paris, Nov. 16 (AP).—Russia and the Western powers apparently doomed the Lie-Evatt plea for renewed Berlin peace negotiations by announcing today their previous positions remained unchanged.

The Western power position was disclosed by President Truman at Key West, Fla. He said flatly that the United States will not resume four-power talks on Germany until Russia lifts the Berlin blockade.

Russia, on the other hand, said in a note to Dr. Herbert V. Evatt, president of the United Nations Assembly, and Trygve Lie, U. N. secretary-general, that the Council of Foreign Ministers must consider all German problems, not merely the Berlin dispute.

The Soviet note said nothing about lifting the Berlin blockade.

The Russians said more plainly than ever that they would like a Big Four meeting of Prime Minister Stalin, President Truman, Prime Minister Attlee of Britain and Premier Queuille of France.

While the United States, Britain and France still have not given their formal replies to the Lie-Evatt letter proposing big-power talks on Berlin, informed quarters said they would follow the general line laid down by Mr. Truman.

Secretary of State Marshall, Foreign Minister Robert Schuman and British Minister of State Hector McNeil met for 40 minutes today and agreed on their replies. They held them up, however, for final approval by their governments.

Persons close to Lie and Evatt said they were determined to press their campaign for agreement on Berlin.

These sources said Evatt had sent personal telegrams to the four leaders after the letter had been handed to their chief delegates here Saturday. These telegrams were said to have stressed the value of personal contacts among the leaders.

The Soviet reply was signed by Andrei Y. Vishinsky, Deputy Foreign Minister and head of the Russian U. N. delegation.

After recalling that Russia had invited the other big powers to convene the Council of Foreign Ministers on the entire German question, the note said Russia still stands by this bid.

It then added:

"The Soviet government shares your point of view that the solution of the Berlin question will have a positive effect on the settlement of other questions such as those of peace settlements for Germany, Austria and Japan.

"The Soviet government also shares your point of view regarding the importance of personal contract and mutual confidence among the heads of powers in the improvement of relations."

16 Million Workers Lag in Pay—Tobin

Cincinnati, Nov. 16 (AP).—Earnings of some 16 million workers are 9 per cent behind the "third round" of postwar wage increases already received by big, mass industry employes, Secretary of Labor Tobin said today.

Answering a news conference question as to whether a fourth round of increases is inevitable, Tobin answered that in certain fields "workers haven't received a third round yet."

The Labor Secretary said the Bureau of Labor Statistics has found that 16 million workers are trailing the mass production industries, which have received three pay hikes since June, 1946.

Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman said today "enemies of democracy" are trying to grab control of labor unions to gain vantage points for attacking democratic government.

Steelman, in an address to the American Federation of Labor's 67th convention, said "Communists look upon labor organizations as rich fields for infiltration into community life."

All over the world, he said, enemies of democracy are trying to step into positions of leadership in trade unions.

Steelman lauded American labor representatives described as among our best "ambassadors of good will" abroad. He did not elaborate.

Reference to Election

Steelman made only passing reference to the recent election.

"You remember the old quip that a political platform is 'something to get in on,'" Steelman told delegates.

"You know — and millions of Americans know and approve the fact—that our great President, Harry S. Truman, holds no such view of a political platform.

"You know, too, that these programs to which you are dedicated and to which the President is dedicated, cannot be attained without overcoming strong opposition from those whose selfish interests are affected."

Steelman commented that "we have a President in the White House who will fight." Cheers went up from the delegates at this departure from text by the White House aide.

James Roosevelt, eldest son of the late President and California Democratic leader, thanked ALF delegates for "all the kind things you have said about my father."

Store Union Picks Wolchok For 5th Term

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 16 (AP).—The CIO Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union today reelected its president, Samuel Wolchok, for a fifth term.

Founder of the union 11 years ago, the 52-year-old Wolchok was the overwhelming convention choice over George R. Donahue of New York, leader of a minority group which had consistently opposed the president's leadership.

Swept into office with Wolchok were administration choices for the other two top offices.

Elected secretary-treasurer was 28-year-old Alvin Heaps, World War I veteran from Chicago, succeeding John V. Cooney, who was not a candidate for reelection. Heaps, a member of Local 15 of Chicago and a member of the executive board, was the unanimous convention choice.

Executive Secretary Martin C. Kyne was reelected.

Dock Strike Boosts Air Business Here

Airlines in Washington yesterday reported increased business due to the East Coast longshoremen's strike.

Potomac Yards in Alexandria contined its increased rail freight-car handlings.

Typical comments:

American Overseas Airlines: "We're adding five extra flights to our present 15 a week."

Pan American Airways: "We booked overseas flight space today for five or six persons who had passage o nthe canceled sailing of the S. S. America. They're mostly Government people."

Trans World Airline: "We picked up some reservations from the America; expect more from the Queen Elizabeth, and more still if the Queen Mary cancels its west-bound trip from Cherbourg November 24."

"In the first three days since the strike began, we handled 16,644 freight cars, an increase of more than 1000 over the same period the previous week, or about 6 per cent. We don't ordinarily handle bananas from Charleston, S. C.—they usually come into Baltimore by boat. We've handled between 200 and 300 carloads of bananas the last few days."

NLRB Plans Vote Despite State Law

The National Labor Relations Board ruled yesterday that it will hold union shop elections in States with laws regulating such compulsory union membership arrangements.

Under the Taft-Hartley Act, a union and employer are permitted to negotiate a union shop agreement only if (a) workers to be covered by the arrangement have agreed to it in an NLRB election and (b) there is no State law barring the union shop.

The union shop requires workers, once they are hired, to become union members.

However, 14 States prohibit the union shop. Their laws declare that employment cannot be denied a worker because of membership or nonmembership in a union. Some time ago the NLRB ruled it would not hold union shop elections in such States.

Three more States, Wisconsin, Colorado and New Hampshire, have laws requiring a two-thirds or larger vote among employes to authorize a union shop. The Federal Taft-Hartley law requires only a majority authorizing vote.

Yesterday's case involved employes of the Northern Greyhound Lines, Inc., a bus firm operating in eight States, including Wisconsin. Their AFL bus workers union asked for an NLRB election to authorize a union shop.

Since many of the bus workers operate across State lines, the board said it will consider workers eligible for the union shop as long as their operating base headquarters are outside the State whose laws prohibit the union shop.

Strike Clouds Lift as Paralysis Hits Industry

spokesman for the trucking industry said.

New York Postmaster Albert Goldman said 50,000 sacks of mail, mainly relief parcels, had piled up here awaiting shipment to Europe.

He added, however, that mail and food for the armed forces were being loaded at the Brooklyn Army Base and that there would be no delay in the shipments.

The strike became official early Saturday morning—it had started unofficially last Wednesday—when some 65,000 ILA members rejected a pact granting them a hike in the day shift straight time pay from $1.75 to $1.85 an hour and the night and weekend overtime pay from $2.61½ to $2.77½ hourly.

The ILA now is asking 50 cents an hour boost, as originally demanded, plus welfare benefits.

The agreement reached by union and company negotiators November 9 provided, in addition to the wage increases, a one-year contract, a guarantee of four hours' work whenever a man starts on the job, and liberalized vacations for men working 1250 or more hours in a year.

The strike is affecting $25,000,000 worth of imports and exports normally moved through the port of New York daily.

Airlines reported much heavier business on their overseas lines.

President Truman, in Key West, Fla., ruled out the possibility that he might step into the situation. He told newsmen he was powerless under the Taft-Hartley law to act in the dispute.

The longshoremen were legally empowered to strike last week at the expiration of an 80-day "cooling-off period" injunction obtained under the Taft-Hartley law. The injunction had kept the stevedores from walking out earlier.

While South Atlantic and Gulf Coast ports thus far have not been involved in the strike, Joseph P. Ryan, president of the ILA, said they would be fled up if ship owners divert vessels or cargoes there from East Coast harbors.

Ryan added that ILA vice presidents in Galveston, Tex., Jacksonville, Fla., and Mobile, Ala., had been instructed to "warn" ship companies that any more diversions of ship or cargoes will result in tying up South Atlantic and Gulf ports.

Asked if any overtures had been made to the ILA to settle the strike, Ryan said there had been none.

The striking dock workers today received assurances of support from two other maritime unions that man the Nation's ships.

Paul Hall, secretary-treasurer of the AFL Seafarers International Union, told newsmen that the union "has given and will give full support to the longshoremen and will help in any way we're requested to."

Joseph Curran, president of the powerful CIO National Maritime Union, also offered his aid to the strikers. He asked for a meeting to discuss problems in connection with the walkout, and said NMU seamen had been instructed not to perform duties ordinarily handled by longshoremen.

The huge New York port area, meanwhile, remained a dead harbor, with 118 vessels strikebound here and at New Jersey piers, the Nation's largest liner, America, tied up indefinitely, and hundreds of prospective passengers shorebound.

The Cunard White Star liner Queen Elizabeth rode idly at its Southampton dock, its scheduled sailing Wednesday canceled.

First of the railroads to start laying off employes because of the walkout were the New York Central, the Central Railroad of New Jersey and the New Haven. Among them some 1000 workers were idled.

An official of the Boston Wool Trade Association said some New England woolen mills may have to close if the strike lasts longer than a month.

In the trucking industry, Joseph M. Adelizzi, managing director of the Motor Carriers Association of New York, said the effect of the walkout has been "terrific on the trucking industry."

He said 2500 trucks have been affected, with about half of the number "totally idle."

The trucks usually haul cargo to and from piers in New York City and New Jersey.

He added the strike is costing some 1000 trucking firms about $100,000 daily.

Here is how the situation looked at other major East Coast ports:

Boston — Eight vessels dockbound. Mayor James H. Curley asks President Truman to "expedite settlement" of the strike.

Baltimore—49 ships tied up.

Philadelphia—32 ships tied up.

Hampton Roads, Va.—Six ships tied up.

Halifax — Nova Scotian longshoremen refuse to work any more ships diverted from strikebound American ports.

Home Price Decline Is Held Still Far Off

By Pat Harness
Post Reporter

New York, Nov. 16.—The person who is waiting for prices to fall before buying a new house will have a long wait.

That's the opinion of brokers from over the Nation interviewed at the National Association of Real Estate Board's annual convention.

Other highlights:

Prices of new homes are leveling off, with older residential properties generally 10 to 15 per cent below reproduction costs.

Buyers of all types of properties have become more selective, want a home to fit family needs, are discriminative as to price. They shop around and bargain with the broker when they find a property meeting their needs.

GI loans at 4 per cent are practically nonexistent, but combination GI-FHA loans at 4½ and 5 per cent are becoming readily available as money seeks an investment outlet.

Brokers interviewed were Ed Mendenhall, High Point, N. C.; Henry S. Miller, Dallas; F. Poche Waguespack, New Orleans; William J. Campbell, Kansas City, Mo., and John J. Wagner, Cedar Rapids, Iowa. All are members of the National Institute of Real Estate Boards, an affiliate of the association.

Over 3000 delegates, including 50 from the Washington area, are attending convention sessions. Today's highlights included a speech by James A. Farley, former Postmaster General, before the Society of Industrial Realtors during which he attacked communism and recommended immediate resumption of United States diplomatic relations with Spain for security reasons.

At a session of women realtors, the problem of cooperative housing sales, a current controversial subject in the District, was discussed. The speaker, Mrs. Flora K. Tierney of Louisville, told a group of women realtors that such sales opened the door to new business for real estate brokers.

Grange Urges Parley to Draft Program to Avert Depression

Portland, Me., Nov. 16 (AP).—The National Grange convention urged President Truman today to call a conference of a few top leaders in industry, labor and agriculture to draft an antidepression program.

In a telegram to the Chief Executive, national master Albert S. Goss declared preservation of the free enterprise system depends upon the ability of the Nation to establish and maintain a "balanced economy."

The message was sent after the Grange's agriculture committee issued a report declaring failure of industry to keep pace with abundant farm output is a major cause of farm depressions.

Goss took notice of a similar proposal for an economic conference by the executive committee of the American Federation of Labor.

"We note," he said, "that some are advocating a large national conference on the subject. Our experience is that such large assemblies accomplish little or nothing."

Goss told Mr. Truman that big conferences are used by "too many" as a "sounding board to get publicity for selfish purposes."

Rent Rise for General Scott Weighed as Tenants Protest

The District Rent Control Administration is weighing a plea for a 14 per cent rent increase on the General Scott Apartments, at 1 Scott Circle nw.

Rent Examiner James G. Tyson said yesterday the case had been taken under advisement following a hearing in which the owners, through Herbert Harvey, Inc., real estate brokers, asked the increase on the basis of increased operating costs.

As proposed by the landlord, the rents on 180 units would go up from the present $53.50 to $60.42, and from $97.50 to $111.15.

A group of 65 tenants, represented by Herman Miller, attorney, protested the proposed boost, contending that service in the building has deteriorated.

Complaints were made about a "service charge" for private telephones, discrimination on the management's part in redecorating apartments, and cooking odors in the apartment house's air conditioning system.

County Gets 71-Page Fire Code Proposal

A 71-page proposed fire prevention code for Montgomery County was presented to the county commissioners yesterday at Rockville, Md.

Covering all structures except private dwellings, it would apply to all new construction but require no drastic changes in existing buildings. It would be administered by a county fire marshal.

An ordinance embodying the code was drawn up by Dr. Simon H. Ingberg, former chief of the Fire Resistance Section, United States Bureau of Standards, and a committee of 14 county officials, fire officials and civic leaders headed by County Public Utilities Agent Albert E. Conradis, an attorney, after a year of investigations, meetings and hearings.

Several last-minute amendments, suggested by the county fire chiefs last Tuesday, will be studied by the code committee, and approved suggestions will be incorporated by next Tuesday. The county commissioners then are expected to order the code advertised, with a public hearing set for it three weeks from that date.

Violations of the code would constitute misdemeanors, and upon conviction in court, violators may be fined $5 to $100. No provisions are made for imprisonment.

The code regulates:

Fire doors and windows, combustible decorating materials, theatrical stages, motion picture booths, exits and aisles in buildings, fire-extinguishing equipment, fire extinguishers, fire escapes, gasoline and kerosene stoves and heaters, motor vehicles, woodworking plants and lumber yards, stables, junk yards, tents, carnivals, circuses, airplane hangars, bowling alleys, explosives, ammunition, fireworks.

Also covered by the code are inflammable liquids, natural and manufactured gas, liquified petroleum gases, gas refrigerants, gas fumigants, combustible fibrous materials, motion picture film, photographic and X-ray film, plastics, dry cleaning and dyeing, painting and paint spraying, gasoline blow torches, vacant lots; burning of waste, brush and debris.

Commissioners Order Suit To Delay Charter Election

partments of finance, public works and a county attorney's office could not be effected by the commissioners, it was believed.

Welsh explained his suit will be based on three sections of Article 17 of the Constitution. Section 1, he said, provides that "all county officers elected by qualified voters shall hold office for terms of four years." Section II specifies that "election by qualified voters for State and county offices shall be held on the Tuesday next after the first Monday of November in the year 1926 and on the same day in every fourth year thereafter."

Section XI explains that "the purpose of this article is to reduce the number of elections by providing that all State and county elections shall be held only in every fourth year."

The commissioners' action was immediately branded by James W. Hayden, a member of the board which drafted the charter, as "a desperate, last-minute attempt by the commissioners to stay in office without any justification."

"If they had honestly felt that the holding of a council election in January following charter adoption was invalid, they could have raised the question since May, 1947."

"There is no lega. justification whatsoever for the filing of such a suit," Hayden declared. He said the "home-rule amendment" of the Constitution under which charter was adopted provides that a charter form of government may be voted on at a presidential or a general election and it becomes law 30 days thereafter.

"To say that the people should be kept waiting two years for their first charter council is pure nonsense," Hayden said. "You can be sure the Court of Appeals will be asked to act on the question before January 6."

'Sandbagging' Charge Denied

ging means?"

"No," Wallace replied. "I asked a Marine and he told me it means putting down sandbags on a rifle range to rest your rifle on."

(Manthos had explained the term as meaning levying charges against a vulnerable person regardless of the truth of the accusations.)

Wallace's denial of the sandbagging charge was corroborated by Pvt. Miles Richey, formerly of the vice squad, who said he was present during the conversation at Keith's.

Explaining that he could not give a verbatim account of the talk and admitting there might have been some things said that he could not now recall, Richey testified that Manthos opened the conversation by inquiring of Wallace: "Wally, what do you think of the case?"

Richey quoted Wallace as replying: "I don't think about it. I put down what I saw and what I did."

Richey testified that Manthos declared to Wallace: "You know in your heart that you couldn't have observed that many things wrong" at the grill.

The witness said he heard Manthos warn Wallace that the latter was "hurting" himself at No. 1 Precinct and that Wallace declared to Manthos, "I know everything I put in my statement is true."

Richey said he also heard Wallace say: "I think I've got them good."

(Richey and Manthos were transferred and put back in uniform when Wallace was shifted. Manthos was sent to the Sixth Precinct and Richey to the Seventh.)

Earlier Wallace testified that Maj. Robert J. Barrett, police superintendent, and Lieut. Roy Blick, head of the vice squad, had told him to avoid "mudslinging" during the trial.

The policeman made this statement in explaining why he had not originally told the board of seeing Manthos in the grill on two occasions.

Manthos was the first witness yesterday. He testified that he had told Capt. Howard Covell, commanding officer of No. 1 Precinct that he thought the charges against the grill were wrong.

He reiterated previous testimony that he had not seen any violations take place at the cafe at the approximate times charged by Wallace. He declared no enmity existed between him and Wallace, saying "there is no grudge between us not even now."

Alexandria's School Budget Set at $1,275,000 for '49

The Alexandria School Board will ask for about $1,275,000 to operate the city's public schools in 1949, it was indicated last night.

The board met in closed session to take final action on the budget submitted by Superintendent T. C. Williams. The members felt the budget must be sent to the city council for approval before it is made public.

However, the board at an earlier meeting, had agreed on teachers' pay scales, which account for $931,650 of the 1949 budget, and indicated last night, general agreement on the rest of Williams' budget.

Board members said the budget probably would be adopted without substantial change.

Williams' tentative budget estimated a total operating cost of $1,275,855, an increase of $135,593, or 11½ per cent above that of the current year.

The State's contribution in 1949 is estimated at $275,148, an increase of $18,676.

Most of the increase is in the appropriation asked of the city which Williams set at $962,294. This is an increase of $115,320 or 13½ per cent over the 1948 appropriation.

Chief cause of next year's increased costs is the pay raise for teachers to take effect in September, 1949.

Salaries for teachers and other school personnel account for 92 per cent of the budget.

The city council can reduce the appropriation asked of the city but it cannot designate which items must be cut. This operating budget is separate from the $2,837,500 building fund allocated to the school board from last summer's bond issue.

Fairfax Bond Petitions To Be Held Up

Petitions for a $7,500,000 school bond issue have struck a snag, the Fairfax County School Board learned last night.

School Superintendent W. T. Woodson told the board at its regular meeting that petition circulators will not present the documents until the right of the new City of Falls Church to participate in any bond election is determined.

Woodson said he understood the issue would have to be decided by Fairfax Circuit Court. The petitions, circulated by the Fairfax School Emergency Committee, are intended for presentation to the board, which then would ask Circuit Court to order a referendum.

The right of Falls Church citizens to vote on the question, or even sign the petitions, has been questioned in view of its recently acquired status as a second-class Virginia city.

The board turned down a proposal to purchase a 20-by-100-foot prefabricated steel building in Linden, N. J. Inspection showed it unsuitable for use as a Fairfax school warehouse.

The board agreed to renew last year's contract with Government officials at Fort Belvoir for the education of 280 children on the post, 80 more at Mount Vernon High School and 10 at Manassas Regional High School.

Pleas Made In 2 Traffic Death Cases

Kenneth G. Wilson, 35, a carpenter, of 6200 54th ave., Riverdale, Md., pleaded nolo contenders yesterday to a charge of negligent homicide growing out of a traffic accident.

Wilson entered the plea before Judge Ellen K. Raedy in Municipal Court. The case was referred to the probation office pending sentence in two weeks.

According to police, Wilson had been drinking and his car skidded 84 feet in striking Fritz Widdekind, 64, of Havre de Grace, Md., at Fenwick st. and New York ave. ne. Widdekind died four days later.

In another traffic-death case, William H. Evers, 28, a Capital Transit bus operator, pleaded innocent to negligent homicide. A coroner's jury held Evers responsible for the November 12 death of Dr. Sara Winifred Brown, 80, a retired physician, at 12th and K sts. nw.

Flour for Home Use Has Sharp Price Rise

Minneapolis, Nov. 16 (AP).—Flour milled for home baking went to $6.90 a hundredweight, wholesale today. This represented a 20-cent increase in the last two days.

A milling industry spokesman attributed the rise to climbing wheat prices. He pointed out that until a 10-cent increase was put into effect late yesterday the price had been stationary at $6.70 since October 22.

Bakery flour advanced 10 cents a hundredweight yesterday and remained unchanged today at $6.15.

Attorney Appointed For Miss Campbell

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Miss Helen Campbell, 63, former secretary to Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.), said yesterday in District Court that she is too poor to hire an attorney.

Charged with conspiracy along with Thomas in an alleged "kickback" system from listed employes of Thomas' office, Miss Campbell was due to be arraigned before Judge Richmond B. Keech.

Thomas pleaded innocent Monday after he refused to testify before the investigating grand jury on the ground that he might incriminate himself.

After her plea of poverty, Judge Keech released Miss Campbell on her personal bond to appear in the court this afternoon. He later appointed as her attorney John R. Fitzpatrick, former dean of Columbus University School of Law and one time assistant United States attorney.

Photographers surrounded her as she left the courthouse. She posed for pictures and declared:

"There isn't anything I care to say. I'm in a spot and of course would like to get off of it. I see no reason why I shouldn't."

In court, she said she had been out of work for several months and was trying to scrape up money to post a bond so she would not be jailed pending the trial, set for January 10

4 Convicted In Jobless Pay Frauds

Four persons, including a District Highway Department worker, have been convicted recently on unemployment compensation fraud charges and a fifth is scheduled for trial next week, the District Unemployment Compensation Board announced last night.

Among those convicted was George Wilson, 43, of 1103 Harvard st. nw., highway department laborer, who was found guilty yesterday by Municipal Court Judge Thomas D. Quinn. He will be sentenced November 30.

The fraud charges were placed against the men for applying for and accepting unemployment compensation checks when they were actually employed.

Board officials said most fraud cases are uncovered by checking wage lists submitted by employer against unemployment pay requests, but since the District government does not submit such lists, yesterday's case was the result of police "tailing" a recipient after picking up his check.

Deputy Director of Highways Samuel R. Harrison said he had not been informed of the case, but would investigate upon receiving information from the compensation board.

One case to be heard Tuesday involves a Maryland night club employe, who was arrested by police on another charge. During search police found him holding pay checks from the night club, as well as the district board.

The other three cases were Henry W. Lucas, 55, 422 New York ve. nw., a porter, who was convicted Monday; Roosevelt Kelly, 21, 221-B Half st. sw., laborer, convicted early this month; and George Jones, 48, 1115 7th st. ne., cement finisher, convicted October 12. Sentences are being delayed pending a check with probation officials.

Violation of the unemployment act carries a maximum penalty of $100 and 60 days in jail for each count.

Miss Bentley, Self-Styled Spy, Becomes Catholic

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Elizabeth T. Bentley, self-styled "Soviet spy queen," has embraced the Catholic faith.

She was baptized November 5 in a Washington, D. C., church by the Right Rev. Fulton J. Sheen, who also effected the return to Catholicism of Louis Budenz, former editor of the Communist Daily Workers.

Miss Bentley, star witness at recent House Un-American Activities Committee hearings into communism, attended the Third Presbyterian Church in Rochester, N. Y., when she lived there.

She had been reported missing last Saturday by attorneys who filed a $100,000 slander suit against her. They said a month's search failed to locate her.

The attorneys represented William W. Remington, former Department of Commerce official, who charges she slandered him by repeating on a television program statements she made before a congressional committee that he had been a Communist and furnished her with vital information while he was employed by the Government and she was a Soviet courier.

Petty Harassment

The reaction of the great majority of Montgomery County citizens to the latest move to prevent the charter form of government approved in the recent election from going into effect, we surmise, will be one of disgust. The diehards have fought this modernization of the county government at Rockville for many years. They have been thoroughly trounced and repudiated at the polls. Now they are stooping to mere obstructionism of the pettiest sort.

We have made no study of the detailed constitutional issues that the obstructionists have raised. But the basic facts are these: Maryland's constitution gives counties the right to draft home-rule charters and submit them to the people for approval. This the people of Montgomery County have done, and the election of their first council is scheduled for January 6. If there is any valid constitutional issue at stake, it must necessarily be carried to the courts for whatever adjustment, if any, may be required. But the scheme approved by the county commissioners yesterday—to obstruct the orderly inauguration of the new charter government by enjoining the election—is so outrageous as to discredit its sponsors. They have put themselves in the role of saboteurs. It is difficult to believe that that sort of leadership will find substantial support in any quarter.

FAO Conference

As some 350 delegates from 57 member countries begin the fourth annual conference of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization in Washington, a review of the world food situation finds the picture materially improved over a year ago. Food production, to be sure, is still below normal, the gravest deficiency being animal products and fats and oils generally. But the dismally narrow margin on which some countries were operating a year ago has been broadened. A good growing season has followed near-disaster in Europe, world cereals are more plentiful, and in general the FAO looks for restoration of prewar levels of consumption by 1950.

It would be hard to trace the exact part that the FAO has played in this improvement. The primary impulse, of course, has been national survival. Demand arising from hunger, plus increasing population and a general awareness of nutritional standards, have forced individual governments to take action. The FAO's role has been that of a synthesizer of national programs. It has pointed out danger spots, formulated long-range goals, and given technical advice for increased production. These are necessary functions, if sometimes obscured by the needs of the moment.

One of FAO's most popular and effective activities has been the International Emergency Food Committee. This body has been responsible for allocating scarce food supplies on the basis of need, and has enjoyed an unusual degree of cooperation. There is a good argument for relaxing controls as quickly as possible so as to give the maximum opportunity to individual initiative in normal channels of trade. The over-all situation is still sufficiently critical, however, to warrant keeping the IEFC for another year, though its program should be modified by use of maximum import agreements which, if adhered to, themselves guarantee access to supply.

Although missing from the formal agenda, undoubtedly the proposed world wheat pact will come up for discussion. This did not materialize principally because of the failure of Congress to approve it. The FAO conference can be expected to gauge its stand on the possibility of passage by the new Congress. The pact still seems to us a desirable instrument for reconciling surplus with famine, though perhaps it would stand a better chance of world-wide acceptance in a period of relatively normal supply. Beyond this, the conference will debate whether the permanent FAO site will be in Washington or Copenhagen. Despite the attractions of Washington, there is a strong case for the Danish capital, on the ground that operation there would be less expensive and the FAO would not feel subordinated by other activities.

Whether or not the conference takes definite action on all these points, delegates will at least have a chance to turn their attention from emergency and organizational details to long-range plans for more world food production. This is FAO's real job. If world living standards are ever to improve permanently, then national governments must be made fully aware of the necessity for more efficient use of land resources. These remain static while population increases.

St. Laurent's Elevation

Three months ago Mr. Mackenzie King, Canada's Prime Minister, decided to quit politics and pass on his mantle as leader of the Liberal Party to Mr. Louis S. St. Laurent. The party approved his choice. The question remained how long it would be before Mr. St. Laurent took up Mr. Mackenzie King's Premiership. With Mr. Mackenzie King almost an institution in Canada, and used to the wielding of power, there were those who prophesied that Mr. St. Laurent would have a long time to wait. It has proved otherwise. Mr. Mackenzie King, who for months has been far from well, had a sick spell during the Commonwealth Conference last month in London and has now stepped out of his Premiership in favor of Mr. St. Laurent.

Mr. Mackenzie King, who has headed the Canadian government for more than 21 years, combined shrewdness in politics with an old-fashioned liberal tradition. The latter, expressed in a feeling for provincial or states rights, was fortified by the localism of French-speaking Quebec, whence the Liberals draw their main strength. Canada for these reasons has resisted centralization more successfully than has the United States. This development has an element of curiosity, for the organic law of Canada, contrary to that of the United States, gave residual power to the federal government. In both countries, however, the stuff of much of their politics is the relations between the central and the local authorities. Mr. St. Laurent, himself a Quebec man, is likely to be more zealous in safeguarding provincial rights and sentiment than Mr. Mackenzie King.

Mr. Mackenzie King saw his primary role in external relations as a sort of interpreter's house between Britain and the United States. In both countries he won confidence and respect, and he will have the good wishes of innumerable friends the world over in his retirement. This comes in his seventy-third year. His successor is only seven years younger, but his spirit is youthful, and his views of Canada's role in the world, now to be translated into action, may open a new page in Canada's history. Partly out of the habit of being an interpreter's house, Canada has tended to seek, and encourage other nations to pursue, the path of sweet reasonableness. International conferences since the war all bear the impress of Canadian compromise, which, though not decisive, has been a moderating influence. From now on the world may well witness more initiative on international policy from our Canadian friends—not only because of the new leadership, but also because of the disintegration of the one world hope for mankind.

An inkling of change in this respect has already been observed in the discussions on an Atlantic Pact. Mr. St. Laurent is in the forefront of its advocates. Far from "going along," he is pressing. He sees the pact as the necessary foundation of peace in this troubled world, the means of halting the forces of aggression. In pushing it the Canadians are not fettered by the schizophrenia of the French and the constitutional caution of the Americans. In this air age they are in the path of war, and this has spurred a sense of responsibility. There can be no doubt that they have the ability to exercise leadership—some of them already are embryonic world statesmen. We welcome the prospect that the new team in Ottawa, working through like-minded representatives in the various embassies abroad, is likely to make the pace in the Atlantic consultations. Not the least of Mr. Mackenzie King's titles to statesmanship is the way he paved the way for and insured his succession.

Raiding The Courts

Rumors as to impending changes in President Truman's Cabinet are as numerous as clowns in a circus, and some of them ought not to be taken any more seriously. When the speculators ran out of prominent names of men in private life, they turned to the Supreme Court and suggested that Chief Justice Vinson or Justice Douglas may become Secretary of State when and if Secretary Marshall resigns. It must be admitted that the Vinson-to-Moscow project which the President planned and then abandoned during the campaign gives a certain logic to the idea that the Chief Justice might shift over to the State Department. Yet this speculation seems to belong in the realm of fantasy.

Mr. Vinson holds the position which ranks second only, in the American governmental hierarchy, to that of the President himself. We can recall only one Chief Justice who ever resigned that high post for any other. In the days before the Supreme Court had begun to function as a great judicial body, Chief Justice John Jay left the bench to become Governor of New York. It is true, of course, that Chief Justice Chase, appointed by Lincoln, kept his eyes turned longingly toward the White House, but no Chief Justice has left the Court even to run for the Presidency. We have no doubt that Mr. Vinson places as high an estimate on the dignity and importance of his office as his predecessors have done, and that he must deplore the suggestion that he is ready to abandon it to return to the Cabinet.

The practice of raiding the Supreme Court for men to take over administrative posts has nothing to commend it. To be sure, misfits are sometimes appointed to the Supreme Bench as a reward for service rendered, and probably no loss is suffered if they later decide to return to a more active life elsewhere. But the initial mistake is in appointing men who lack training and temperament for judicial work. Life tenure for judges was prescribed in the Constitution so that men who went on the bench could give themselves up wholly to the work of the judiciary. We have often commended the late Chief Justice Stone and others for refusing to take administrative assignments that would inevitably have impaired their standing as judges. Having toiled and sweated over the filling of the Chief Justiceship, President Truman is doubtless keenly aware of the necessity for stability as well as judicial detachment on the high bench.

Church And State

A fine question as to the scope of the Supreme Court's ban on "released time" programs for religious education in public schools is presented by the decision of Justice Roscoe V. Elsworth of the New York Supreme Court to the effect that "released time" programs in that State are legal. Justice Elsworth did not, of course, take issue with the Supreme Court's decision in the McCollum case. But he found significant differences between the "released time" programs in Champaign, Ill., which the Supreme Court condemned, and the New York practice. In Champaign, school buildings were used for religious instruction, thus entailing expenditure of tax funds for a purpose that is beyond the power of government under the Constitution. In New York the practice is merely to release children from attendance at school for one hour a week so that they may attend classes conducted by various churches off school property.

Clearly there is a distinction between the two systems. New York is not using school property or tax funds for religious purposes. But it is using the public school system for the promotion of various faiths to the extent of giving children school time for religious instruction. Children are released for religious classes upon request from their parents, and their attendance at those classes must be reported to the school authorities. Is that sufficient participation to invalidate the New York programs as an encroachment upon the separation of church and state? Certainly condemnation of the New York plan would not have the same clear-cut foundation that existed in the McCollum case.

Whether or not the release of children from school for religious instruction off school property is a wise public policy is quite a different issue. We are inclined to think it is not. While we have often pointed to the need for more religious instruction in the churches and greater faith among the people, the churches cannot properly rely upon the public schools for the performance of any part of their function. In matters of this sort, as Justice Elsworth points out, the State must be utterly neutral. Its function is to guarantee freedom of religion. If it undertakes in any manner to foster religion, the danger of fostering a particular religion is enhanced. We suspect that a great majority of the American people prefer to have their churches stand entirely upon their own merits. It is not a question of secularism but of keeping church and state in their respective spheres.

Sicilian Incident

Our serialization of General Eisenhower's Crusade in Europe arrived yesterday at the occasion when Gen. George S. Patton, jr., slapped a hospitalized soldier in Sicily. The details related by General Eisenhower are substantially the same as became known sometime after the incident itself had occurred. The only significant addition is an excerpt from a letter Patton wrote Eisenhower after the furor had quieted down. The extraordinarily sentimental phrases of Patton's apology reveal once again the man's extreme emotionalism—which was at once his strength and his weakness as a military leader.

Patton's besetting trouble was bad judgment in nonstrategic matters. This weakness General Eisenhower recognized, and the slapping incident was not the only time he "had to devise ways and means to minimize the harm that would certainly come from his (Patton's) impulsive action." The means devised puzzled and repelled us at the time. And we do not think Eisenhower's account now entirely clears up the mystery of a supposedly nonexistent censorship that successfully bottled up the story for three months, keeping it, incidentally, from Congress at a moment when Patton was up for promotion.

It appeared then and it does now that General Eisenhower did not impose censorship on the incident. But somebody did, if not directly then indirectly, and contrary to what Eisenhower says were his specific instructions to his staff. The slapping incident, a cause celebre when it became known, was a momentary piece of hysterics for which Patton paid a full measure of humiliation, though not of official reprimand, and for which, in any case, his battlefield accomplishments more than compensated. We do not find particular fault with Eisenhower's clear desire to put the best possible light on the incident for the sake of Patton's memory. But we do think the Eisenhower memoirs might well have hit out harder and straighter at the subsequent effort to cover up the incident. For the military has yet to learn that its best public relations policy is to let the people know of its mistakes as well as its achievements.

Chest Support

It looks as if the Community Chest campaign again stands or falls on the willingness of the business houses to "kick in." Lag in the business unit reports indicates either a lack of support by thousands of business houses and employes, or that the establishments are not being solicited. Meanwhile, many businesses which always generously support this great community enterprise are getting tired of holding the bag for the rest.

Policy Illusions

Attention is called to what may be fallacies or contradictions in our thinking concerning our foreign relations as follows:

That we can make any nation think we feel friendly toward it at the same time that we arm openly against it and form alliances against it.

That we can accomplish the rehabilitation of Europe, a process requiring stability and a feeling of security, at the same time that we talk war and make warlike preparations, thereby creating a sense of insecurity and possibly hysteria.

That we can buy good will through charity. (Proud people will accept our charity but hate us for debasing them.)

That we can cure deep-seated economic evils through gifts or loans of money. (The economic ills of Europe existed before the war and there can be no enduring change as long as conditions remain the same.)

That an army that does not want to fight can be converted into an effective fighting force by supplying it with arms, equipment and instruction.

That governments composed of men who do not believe in democracy can be induced to establish democratic systems or to promote democracy by giving or lending them money.

That American aid to corrupt and reactionary governments and parties will create respect and increase the good will for the United States in Europe and Asia.

That Chinese Communists will necessarily be under Russian control. (At one time the Chinese leader Mao Tze Tung was expelled from the Third International. The attempt of the Russians to lead a Communist movement in China in the 20s was such a fiasco that since then the Russians seem to have stayed out of China. The Chinese Communists, however, may maintain a formal unity.

That Russia was opposed to our launching the European Recovery Program (Russia could easily have killed this program by agreeing to participate and the last United States Congress would have finished the job.) It seems more reasonable to suppose that she was quite willing to see the program undertaken but made political issue of it nevertheless and hoped that it would strain the United States economy.

That Russia does not want the United States to increase her armaments. (As evidence that this is untrue, while the United States bars shipment of strategic materials to Russia, Russia is shipping chromium and manganese, both strategic materials, to this country in large quantities.) Russia presumably does not think that a war will happen and consequently is glad to have the United States spend billions arming herself and western Europe on the theory that such expenditures will help to bring on a depression in the United States or make the expected depression worse. A depression in the United States seems to be what Russia wants most.

Military Ethics

Gen. Omar Bradley's statement on the front page of your November 11 issue appalls me with the suggestion that one of our leaders may have so little understanding of his own position. The vast majority of "man," including scientists (and housewives like myself) stumble blindly through a political and military darkness and toy precariously with the hope that such leaders know what they have done, are doing, and will do.

To my present understanding, "man" here in the United States today seems to be in the exact reverse position to that in which General Bradley places him. As I understand it, we now live in a world of nuclear infancy and if man knows more about war, more about killing, than he knows about living, would General Bradley wish to suggest that the gallant who offered, and sometimes gave, their lives in World War II did so without a display of present-day ethical gianthood?

Personally I would like to see a little more science and a little less of this variety of military "ethics" decorating the front pages of our national newspapers.

Cutting Red Tape

The President has again shown himself the people's friend by dramatically bypassing Army and Veterans' Administration action (or lack of action. (Story on page 1 of your issue of November 13.) Mrs. John S. Power will receive in two days what the two agencies mentioned have owed her for 10 months.

But wouldn't it be fairer to the taxpayer, and to all the victims of bureaucratic red tape (though less dramatic perhaps), if the Chief Executive offices slogged a bit more steadily on the job, here in Washington, so that agencies under executive control would know administrative supervision to be more than a farce? I'm betting there would be a lot less time killing between 9:30 and 5.

This was what a lot of thinking and patriotic Republicans voted for—an Administration headed by a man of proved able, vigorous day-in-and-day-out efficiency. Good-heartedness is not enough.

Dorothy Kilmer

A few nights ago a newscaster on a local radio station made the statement that whether Dorothy Kilmer ever walks again will probably depend upon the funds contributed to her in the current public subscription. In other words, if you have money you may receive the best of medical care; otherwise you can remain paralyzed. Is any greater argument needed in favor of socialized medicine?

"China And Greece"

Your November 13 editorial "China and Greece" proposes that we sign an Atlantic Pact which will operate in the Far East much as does the Caribbean Commission. You are concerned over the disharmony of the "old colonial proprietors" over the way to handle "independence movements" in the Far East. Aside from the fact that the Caribbean situation and the Far Eastern situation are miles apart, both geographically and ideologically, you are not convincing that independence movements have not already reached a point in the Far East where "handling" is practically impossible.

The "handling of independence movements" in the Far East, in the past, has always been a little bloody. The real meaning of an Atlantic Pact for "handling" the situation in the Far East, must inevitably mean that some one is going to get hurt. The "proprietors," meaning Britain in Malaya, France in Indo-China and Holland in Indonesia, are in no condition, in view of the situation in Europe, to devote the necessary lives and treasure to "promote this common action."

As analyzed this program sounds suspiciously like the insistence in 1941 by certain powers, including China, that under no circumstances must we come to terms with Japan, but must maintain their principles if it killed us. May I point out that even the most casual student of Far Eastern history will see that what is going on in China today has been going on for thousands of years; that Britain and France tried to bring some order out of chaos as far back as the Opium Wars, but were able to establish only oases of order in the Treaty Ports; that in 1937 Japan embarked upon the task which eventually caused her downfall; and that now Russia, who by the way you never mention in your editorial, has undertaken the task.

Why not assume that history will repeat itself and that Russia also, after pouring her treasure into China, will find it a hopeless problem? Why China is in chaos is a matter of economics rather than politics; it is a matter of soil erosion; overpopulation; starvation; deforestration; and back to soil erosion, all in a vicious circle.

REALIST.

Help For France

Malvina Lindsay, in her November 6 column calling for aid for France, points out for the benefit of the "wondering taxpayer": "In France, as elsewhere, the official American aid goes to the government. It may be used to buy needed products, but these are sold, not given, to the people. Marshall Plan aid isn't charity—it's reconstruction!" If the press had given the Marshall Plan the coverage it deserved from the beginning we would not have so many "wondering taxpayers!"

Nor has the main point of Miss Lindsay's article, namely the importance to every American of encouraging the French people by every possible means in these crucial times, been given adequate coverage.

The weary and harassed peoples of the world are watching the battle between our philosophy, based on the rights of the individual, on one hand and the theory of the classless humanity of Soviet Russia on the other. If by ignorance, carelessness and sheer stupidity we fail France today we may well find ourselves and western civilization the losers tomorrow!

Mobilizing Free Minds

By Malvina Lindsay

Waging Peace Now

SELF-RIGHTEOUS nationalists in their frequent boasting of the billions "we" have given to "foreigners" usually include the private contributions—now estimated at 200 million dollars in cash and materials—Americans have made for educational reconstruction abroad. Yet those giving this regard it not as a handout but as an investment. They see it bringing in dividends of international friendship and of national safety for their children. They even see it helping preserve the precarious peace of their time.

A report on how this 200 million dollars—much of which came from grass-roots nickels and dimes—has been invested in human minds abroad will be made at the third international conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, opening today in Beirut, Lebanon.

For nearly a month in this ancient, mountainous country scholars, teachers, scientists and other intellectuals of the '44 UNESCO nations will be working out a peace-waging program for the coming year. Probably their voices won't be heard above the thunder of argument and contention in the General Assembly in Paris, or above the saber rattling going on around the world. But their reports of what people are doing on their own to wage a mental peace show that a solidarity of free men is getting under way rapidly.

ONE AID to the routing of American isolationism in the recent election was the education that has taken place through the foreign reconstruction projects that communities, churches and organizations have been carrying on. About 150 American cities and towns have now adopted communities abroad. Typical are those in the State of Kansas where the Neosho County Council formed a partnership with the Dutch town of Zevenbergen and is sending school supplies; where the Brown County Council adopted a school in Italy, and where Kansas State College adopted Lingnan University in China and made an initial gift of 500 books.

Thousands of schools and classes have been sending books and other school supplies, also poems, pictures, clippings and addresses of "pen pals" to foreign schools and groups of children. College students through their World Student Service Fund have helped 1344 Chinese students with scholarships, aided 75,000 other Chinese students to resume classes, sent 400,000 pounds of food to universities in Europe, given study grants to 1200 students in displaced persons camps—contributed in all $1,822,960 to students in war-devastated countries.

Students in other countries, even in China and India, have also contributed generously to help those less fortunate pursue their studies. In a few years many of the students thus aided will likely become leaders in their countries and be in a position to influence international relations.

CHURCH GROUPS, clubs, foundations, professional organizations, all have been giving time, money and materials to keep schools, churches and libraries abroad functioning, to aid teachers, scientists, students and all those concerned with the "defenses of peace within the mind." And in the rapidly growing interchange of persons movement, 21,000 foreign students are now in this country, while at least 10,000 American students were abroad last summer.

UNESCO is not responsible for all these projects, but it has encouraged those already existing and has widely promoted aid to foreign schools, libraries and students as a means of welding permanent links between peoples of different nations.

Leaders of UNESCO recognize the urgency of holding what peace there is now, as well as of building the foundation for a more solid peace tomorrow. This will be emphasized at the Beirut conference. The organization's greatest immediate need in mobilizing the free minds of the world is a voice—one that, in the words of Archibald MacLeish can speak "as loud as the wrangling voices that shout at each other in the war of nationalistic propaganda."

In other words, it needs a world radio network. If the more powerful members of the U. N. mean what they say about peace they will see that it gets one. For the more that truth and ideas are kept alive the safer becomes life on this planet.

Military Influence

Now your gremlins have drafted even tuberculosis and devised a new category which will certainly be news even in this "unpredictable" age of ours: They have found that a "military tuberculosis" has appeared on the stage of medical science and that "At Gallinger Hospital 20 to 200 patients were found in the military stage" (of tuberculosis). (See page 2 of your November 12 edition.)

In order to put the record straight it might be well to point out that the gremlins wanted apparently to pull a fast one and, subdued by the nervous tension about a new war, made a "military" tuberculosis out of a "miliary."

The War Through Many Eyes

LIKE THE flow of lava from a bottomless volcano, the flood of personal reminiscences about the war continues. Far from abating, it promises to grow in volume.

Childs

The personal story of Marine Corps Lieut. Gen. Holland M. Smith now appearing serially has stirred a hornet's nest of controversy. Smith revives the dispute over the conduct of the battle for Saipan when he removed the Army commander.

To answer the Marine Corps version of the battle, Secretary of the Army Kenneth Royall opened secret files. The Army defends its commander at Saipan, Maj. Gen. Ralph Smith, pointing to two official judgments upholding the Army Smith over the Marine Corps Smith.

Plainly here is another place where unification has worked not at all. This battle of the memoirs has in fact caused Secretary of Defense James Forrestal a lot of worry.

For weeks prior to publication, the Holland Smith story stirred a mimic warfare in the Pentagon. Aware of the storm it would stir, Forrestal seriously considered ways and means of censoring the memoir. Smith is on the retired list.

WHAT HE came up against, however, is a major discrepancy between the services in this matter. A long-standing Army regulation provides that anything written by an officer, whether retired or not, must be submitted for approval.

Thus Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, whose story of the Allied command in the battle for Europe is also appearing serially, submitted his manuscript to the department for clearance. So have all other Army officers writing for publication.

But the Navy and Air Force have no such regulation covering retired officers. So there was nothing Forrestal could do about the Holland (Howling Mad) Smith story.

Discussing the implications of censorship both with officers and with civilians, Forrestal has contemplated an over-all rule applying to the three services. To restrict one and not the others is clearly unfair.

Whether the kind of censorship aimed at eliminating frictions between services and between allies is permissible in peacetime is the question troubling the Secretary of Defense. The reading public does not distinguish between retired officers and those on active duty. Sensational articles by retired Air officers are mistaken for official policy.

It is a troublesome business and bound to cause unhappiness until it is resolved at the top. So long as the market remains good for this kind of personal narrative, so long will the principals be eager to tell all or nearly all.

SEVERAL principals are still to be heard from. Gen. Omar N. Bradley has tentatively begun his story of the European war, but he will be unable to publish until his four years' tour of duty as Chief of Staff is ended. Admiral Ernest King, Chief of Naval Operations throughout the global conflict, has not yet given us his version, nor has Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of staff to Roosevelt and Truman and a participant in every high-level conference.

Charles Bohlen, counselor of the State Department, is the only living American who knows exactly what Roosevelt and Stalin said to each other at Tehran and Yalta, since he was interpreter for the President. Some time ago a magazine offered him a large sum for his story, but fortunately Bohlen, just about the ablest career officer in the department, said no.

One of the most fascinating narratives to appear thus far is Robert Sherwood's book about Harry L. Hopkins, based on the Hopkins papers. It contains more hitherto secret documents than anything yet published. While he frankly admires Hopkins, Sherwood is, nevertheless, remarkably fair in his judgments, unlike the haters and vilifiers who seem determined to prove that every American involved in the conduct of the war was wicked and traitorous.

A wisecrack in a current musical revue in New York has a hot number on the best seller list called I Typed the Atlantic Charter. It may get down to that if the appetite for the "inside" story of the war continues. After all, it was the biggest war in history and some 12 million Americans were directly involved, most of whom felt themselves to be pretty small pieces in the puzzle. Now they want to try to catch up with what happened.

The Last Republican

SENATOR Robert A. Taft is one of those exceptional politicians who are also symbols. He stands for old-school Republicanism as George W. Norris used to stand for American progressivism, and Henry Wallace now stands for the moonstruck Left. It is more than ordinarily significant, therefore, that a good many of his colleagues think Taft may abandon the Senate Republican leadership in the next session, and perhaps even retire from the Senate when he comes up for reelection in 1950.

Taft did most of the thinking and most of the homework for the Republican senatorial rank and file of the Eightieth Congress. Thus the end of his leadership would be a major event in any case. If he is really considering a progressive withdrawal from active politics, his decision may be taken as marking the end of an era of American life.

It must be added at once that Taft left this country for his European trip without disclosing his plans. No one here knows for certain what he proposes to do in the peculiar new circumstances created by President Truman's victory, for which Taft was even less prepared than most. Nonetheless, there are several different reasons why this remarkable man, one of the strongest personalities in American public life, might now choose to leave the political stage on which he has long played such a conspicuous part.

In the first place Taft's term of service as chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Committee is drawing to a close. He cannot continue even as a member of the policy committee without a change in the Republican conference rules. And if he seeks the formal title of Minority Leader, in succession to Wallace H. White of Maine, he will be strongly challenged by a considerable group of younger Republican Senators.

THE FIRST war whoops of rebellion against Taft have already come from Senator George Aiken of Vermont and others of his group. But in addition to these men who have always fought him, Taft will now be opposed by a much larger group of Senators, like Knowland of California and Lodge of Massachusetts, who have perhaps reluctantly consented to his leadership in the past. Their thesis is that the election was a popular disavowal of the Taft policies. They have candidates for the leadership who would enjoy strong support—Lodge and Knowland are themselves the most obvious possibilities. And their moderate-progressive Republicanism is now close to being the dominant school of thought in the Senate.

This is, of course, crucial. By the defeat of such Senators as Brooks of Illinois and Revercomb of West Virginia, the whole color of Senate Republicanism has been radically altered. The men of the Taft school were in the drivers' seats before. Now the Republicans are divided almost exactly evenly between the two groups, and the men of the older tradition have lost their self-confidence.

If Taft decides to make the fight to hold his place, he is quite likely to be beaten. If he consents to accept the position of one Senator among many, the irrespressible Kenneth Wherry will undoubtedly bid for the leader's post. But Wherry's defeat seems virtually assured. On the whole, it seems likely that the new pattern of Senate Republicanism will crystallize around Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, succeeding Taft as chairman of the policy committee, and either Lodge or Knowland taking White's vacant place as minority leader.

AS TO whether Taft will seek reelection to the Senate in 1950, the Senator has plenty of time to make up his mind. Yet he is fairly likely to be opposed by Ohio's new Governor, Frank Lausche, an exceedingly strong Democratic candidate, against whom he would have a hard battle. And while one of Taft's faults as a politician is his habit of going out of his way to seek a fight, the election must have made him wonder whether the game is worth the candle, after all.

This, for Taft, must be the central problem. He set out, in 1938, to rebuild the Republican Party as it used to be. No one has worked harder, or has shown more character and determination. Yet his whole effort has ended in flat failure all the same. If the election means anything, it means that the electorate will never again support the kind of Republican Party that ruled this country from the death of Abraham Lincoln until the election of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Taft has little patience with the new-fangled Republicanism of Vandenberg, Lodge and Knowland. It would be logical for him to consider bowing out. And if he does so, the older Republicanism will lose its last articulate, respectable and intellectually powerful advocate.

Meanwhile, whatever Taft's choice may be, the mere fact that he has a choice to make speaks volumes about the probable character of the Eighty-first Congress. The new Congress may contain many survivors from the old, but as the move for a new Republican leader clearly suggests, they are going to behave rather differently this time.

D. C. Voters Packed Punch Elsewhere

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The voteless District of Columbia packed a terrific vote punch in the recent Presidential election, and helped influence the result in some close States.

But it hardly clinched a second term in the White House for President Truman, as it was once credited with doing for President Cleveland.

Absentee voting statistics released yesterday by the Democratic and Republican District (State) committees showed ballotless District residents mailed at least 170,000 ballots to their home States.

How many were cast for President Truman is a moot question, but Mrs. Ethel Black, secretary of the Democratic Absentee Voters' Bureau, said she "felt sure" nearly all of the 100,000 serviced through her group did so. Of these, Mrs. Black said 73,000 were actually processed (notarized, etc.) through the Democratic bureau.

Col. George L. Hart, jr., secretary of the Republican State Committee for the District, implied a similar conviction that most of the 70,100 ballots processed by the GOP bureau went for Dewey.

Denied the right of even local suffrage, District absentee voters went to the polls nationally in record numbers and in at least one key State, Ohio, cast far more than the 6817 votes that spelled Truman's slim margin.

Depending on how you figure, Democrats could claim the 7752 absentee counters they sent to Ohio were just enough to put Truman over in that State. Or Republicans could say that the 9200 ballots they cleared to the State more than offset the Truman vote and cute the President's Ohio lead that much.

A reporter asked Hart if he could account for the big D. C. Republican absentee vote claimed for Ohio.

"I guess a lot of Republicans came here from Ohio in the Harding Administration and never went back," replied Hart.

Mrs. Faith Fisher, in direct charge of the GOP absentee voters' bureau, described the Republican absentee statistics as "estimates."

District absentee scoring in the congressional and gubernatorial elections haven't been broken down, but in past campaigns and even is some of the recent Southern primaries the politically scorned District's voteless vote has made and broken Governors and Senators in close contests.

William J. Primm, jr., assistant to Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath, who helped organize the Democratic Absentee Voters Bureau, said District absentee votes cast in the Texas primary, for example, made a Senator of Representative Lyndon B. Johnson.

Johnson was nominated over Former Gov. Coke Stevenson by a bare 87 votes. Absentee District residents sent 250 ballots to Texas, most of them, Primm believes, for Johnson.

He recalled also that the District absentee count clinched another Southern seat for Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.) in the close 1946 Alabama primary race.

Others pointed out that Senator Harley M. Kilgore (D., W.Va.) owes his reelection in 1946 to the D. C. voting edge. At least one State executive in recent years, former Gov. Payne Ratner (R., Kans.), was similarly indebted to the District absentee ballot in 1940.

President Truman, who clocked his own election better than all soothsayers, never underestimated the District's absentee voting wallop.

In fact, he intimated it might make all the difference, in a chat with the D. C. Truman-Barkley Committee in early September.

"Citizens of the District can't vote, but there's a big potential absentee vote here that could be mighty important," he was quoted then as saying.

"It was the absentee vote by D. C. workers who were registered elsewhere that clinched Grover Cleveland's election."

Democratic and Republican absentee voting statistics showed District residents in there pitching in all of the close States, but only in Ohio did they blanket the winning margin.

To Illinois, where Truman's edge was 41,196, District Democrats sent 16,510 votes, Republicans, 8300.

Republicans said they cleared a total of 4600 absentee votes to California, where Truman won by 32,512. Democrats said they processed only 401 California absentees.

The absentee voting score in some of the other closer States, as claimed by officials of the rival party committees:

Nevada, which went to Truman by only 1466 votes: Democratic absentee ballots, 148; Republican, 275.

Idaho, Truman by 5893 ballots: Republican, 925; Democratic, 209.

Delaware, Dewey by only 1712: Democratic, 223; Republican, 425.

Wyoming, Truman by 4291: Republican, 1100; Democratic, 227.

Ironically, District residents who hail from Maryland had no say at all in the neighboring Free State election. Maryland went for Dewey by only 8095 votes, but has no absentee ballot law.

Truman Wants Early Action On Hoover Recommendations

Key West, Fla., Nov. 16 (U.P.).—President Truman said today that recommendations made by former President Herbert Hoover's commission on reorganization of the executive branch of the Government should have the early attention of the new Congress.

At his first news conference since the November 2 election, Mr. Truman made public the text of a letter he sent Mr. Hoover promising his full cooperation and reaffirming "the importance which I attach to the work of the commission."

The President also released a statement in which he was "hopeful that the commission's report will be a milestone in the development of a sound and economical structure and efficient procedures for the executive branch of the Federal Government."

The Hoover commission, which is studying ways of streamlining the executive branch, has scheduled all-day sessions in Washington Thursday and Friday on the Government's purchasing policies.

In his letter to Mr. Hoover, the President said:

"There seems to be a general agreement that the present organization of the executive branch, in many instances, imposes handicaps on effective and economic administration and must be brought up to date.

"The task, as you and I have seen from our own experience, is to crystallize this general belief into concrete and wise proposals for action.

"I am most hopeful that its (the commission's) recommendations will go far to make sound and effective organization possible. If at any time the commission's work can be facilitated by action on my part, you have but to let me know."

If the commission takes the advice of its "task force" preparing detailed reports in Federal supplies, it will recommend that all Government purchasing be directed by one central agency.

Most executive departments and agencies now handle their own buying and the commission is said to feel that this system is inefficient, duplicating and uneconomical.

Should the commission complete this phase of its inquiry before recessing Friday, it may take up another report dealing with the fiscal, budgeting and accounting phases of the Government.

Mr. Hoover said last week that he believes billions of dollars can be saved if some of the commission's recommendations are put into effect. But he stressed that the group has much work to do before it reports to Congress early next year.

FAO Acts on Israel's Bid

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization yesterday decided to put Israel's application for membership before the General Committee, over the protests of several Arab nations.

The dispute over Israel's application came into the open when FAO's general committee asked for authority to consider it.

George Hakim, delegate from Lebanon, immediately protested that the action was premature. He said FAO should not consider the request until the United Nations—FAO's parent group—had decided on Israel's application for membership in U. N.

He was supported by Iraq and Pakistan. Earlier Syria had protested against a report of the Credentials Committee, granting Israel the status of observer at the FAO conference now on at the Shoreham.

Viscount Bruce of Australia, independent chairman of the FAO Food Council, predicted his group will urge that the big wheat producing and consuming countries draw a new International Wheat Agreement. A previous agreement failed of passage when the Eightieth Congress refused to consider it. Any new draft, observers declare, will not be so favorable to the producing countries, including the United States, as was the earlier agreement.

It also was revealed that the United States had agreed reluctantly to continue international controls over scarce food for at least another six months.

FAO delegates were interested yesterday in a Commerce Department announcement that August wheat exports by the United States set a two-year record. They were 14 per cent above July exports, Commerce said.

Peruvian Border Closed by Chile

Santiago, Chile, Nov. 16 (AP).—Chile decided today to close her border with Peru.

The measure was taken because Peruvian troops prevented the export of foods to the Arica region of north Chile, the government announced. The cabinet said the sudden action made it hard to supply the Arica area. Why the imports were stopped was not explained.

Chest Fund Climbs To 67 Pct. of Goal

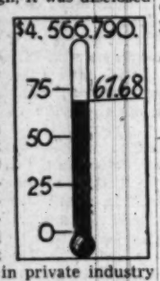
Some 90,000 Washingtonians employed in private industry have not yet contributed to the 1949 Red Feather campaign, it was disclosed yesterday, as the intake inched to 67.68 per cent of the $4,566,790 goal.



Herbert J. Rich, chairman of Business Unit I, told some 100 volunteer workers at a luncheon report session in Hotel Washington that 90,000 workers in private industry have failed to contribute to the Community Chest drive out of a "potential of 145,000" givers. He said 600 firms have failed to report.

Earlier, Assistant Secretary of Interior C. Girard Davidson, chairman of the Government unit, revealed that 40,000 Government workers still have not made a donation to the drive. Of these, he said, 6000 are employed in the District Government.

Agencies named by Davidson as among the "worst" in meeting Chest quotas included Justice, Federal Bureau of Investigation, Washington City Post Office, Atomic Energy Commission, Federal Communications Commission, Potomac River Naval Command, National Labor Relations Board and Federal Trade Commission.

At yesterday's luncheon, three units reported. Business I announced 2149 new givers, bringing the totals to date to 62 per cent of the $1,785,271 quota. Business II brought in 350 new gifts, boosting its intake to 36.62 per cent of the $364,390 goal. Government hit 89.27 per cent of the $1,524,557 quota with 9414 new gifts reported.

Another report session is scheduled for 12:15 p. m. today in Hotel Washington.

Short Staff Keeps 140 TB Patients Out

A shortage of trained personnel at the Glenn Dale Sanatorium is keeping more than 140 persons who are "definitely sick" with tuberculosis out of the hospital.

Dr. Coulter

Dr. A. Barklie Coulter, director of the Health Department's Bureau for Tuberculosis, reported this yesterday at a luncheon meeting of the Civitan Club, held at the Mayflower Hotel.

Dr. Coulter said the Washington situation is "being aggravated every day" because some beds at Glenn Dale are not being used because of depleted staff. He cited an increase in the number of persons who cannot get into Glenn Dale because the sanatorium is able to process only five patients a week, regardless of how many patients leave per week.

The whole situation has been terribly ignored," Dr. Coulter said. In more cheerful vein, he told those at the luncheon that one of the most gratifying results of the mass chest X-ray recently concluded had been the dividend in diagnosis of other diseases.

He said that one doctor alone had had 40 cases of cancer of the lung referred to him. To date, said Dr. Coulter, the doctor has operated on 37 of these cases, and there has been only one death. "This number of people," said Dr. Coulter, "actually have been kept alive by the survey."

D. C. Baptists Vote Budget Of $262,448

The District of Columbia Baptist Convention yesterday adopted a $262,448 budget for 1948-1949 at its annual convention at National Baptist Memorial Church.

An additional $1500 for an evangelistic campaign next September was voted by delegates.

Of the total, $41,500 will be used to pay off indebtedness. Convention officers were directed to borrow $19,000 of this sum immediately for payment of a debt to the Northern and Southern Baptist Conventions. Special offerings will be taken in the 35 churches in the convention to pay off this debt.

The budget calls for expenditure of $110,474 for local work of the convention and a similar amount for cooperative missions gifts to the Northern and Southern Conventions.

The Rev. Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, was reelected president of the convention. Also reelected were Herbert W. Ludwig of Petworth Church, vice president; Elgin Smith of First Church, treasurer, and Everett E. Haycraft of Northwest Church, assistant secretary.

Earl H. Pendell of Avondale Church was named to succeed his wife as secretary.

U. S. Network Of Television Seen by 1952

A tremendous growth of television in the next few years, with a coast-to-coast network by 1952, was predicted by Wayne Coy, Federal Communications chairman, yesterday.

Coy told the Chicago Rotary Club that:

1. I estimate that in another two years we will have 400 stations on the air.

2. My opinion is that we will have 1000 stations . . . in seven or eight years.

3. By the end of this year, more than one million American homes, clubs and public places will have television sets.

4. Some industry leaders predict that by 1955 there will be 17 million in use.

"The commission is studying the possibilities of adding more channels, employing those in the higher part of the radio spectrum," Coy reported. "We are now holding conferences with industry leaders to determine if equipment can be developed to operate in this upper region. I predict that we are going to be able to add those higher channels soon."

Coy described television as a "spectacular eruption." The scheduled linking of the East Coast and Midwest television networks January 12, he said, will be a "mighty milestone" toward the Nation-wide goal.

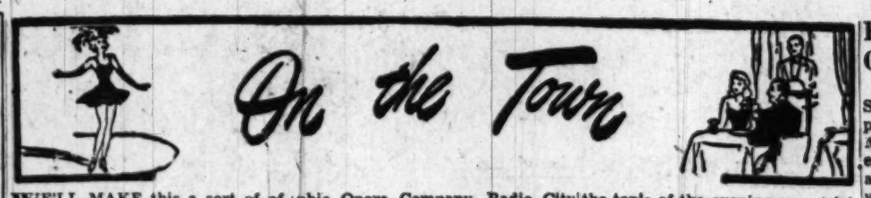
"But it seems to me to be a serious mistake to suppose that television must inevitably grow as an incubus, by sucking out the life blood of other media," he said.

"Contrariwise, I think it would be most unfortunate for the economic well-being of our country if other media should stick their heads in the sands and assume that this new development may not affect them adversely."

D. C. Firm Low Bidder For Staunton Hospital

Irons & Reynolds, Inc., builders of 1701 H st. nw., was the low bidder yesterday on construction of the new King's Daughters Hospital in Staunton, Va.

Associated Press said the Washington firm's $2,054,000 bid was $54,000 under its nearest competitor, the Virginia Engineering Co. of Newport News.



WE'LL MAKE this a sort of official band-day and catch you up on some of the different bands in town.

Bob Millar, who's presently making the music in the Statler Embassy Room, had a bit of an argument with his arranger just before opening. They'd just made a hop up from Texas, where their last job was, and thought it was about time to add a couple of new numbers to their routine. The arranger wanted some sort of a jump number, but that didn't click at all in Bob's mind. Bob wanted "Lavender Blue." They worded it all back and forth and finally Bob mentioned the fact that he was still signing his John Henry on the paychecks. Of course, we don't need to say that "Lavender Blue" was the number that received the arranging job.

Opening night the first request of Bob was made by Margaret Truman. The story wouldn't sound right if she hadn't asked for "L. B.," which she did. At last report friend arranger was accepting Bob's hunches without question.

By the way, if you like husky-throated songstresses, you'll enjoy Marilyn Grady. She trained for grand opera and claims that it was responsible for the tone she's able to dish out.

Tomorrow night a local boy opens in the Balalaika. He's Fague Springmann. Fague had most of his voice training right here in Washington and really got his initial breaks here, too. Fague has soloed with the National Symphony, appeared in recital here, and has sung in the Capitol Theater's "Going Native" revue. His out-of-town engagements were with the Philadelphia Opera Company, Radio City Music Hall, and the topper, Carnegie Hall, comes along in April. Fague has a rich baritone voice that has gotten rave notices from many of the critics. In addition to the voice he looks like a football player and has a mop of curly hair that has the women on his side from the word go. He'll be at the Balalaika for a couple of weeks.

Joel Shaw (the Palladian Room at the Shoreham) had an example of how people suddenly get democratic when they're out of the service. During the war Joel led an orchestra in the Second Air Force for a lot of the dances given at the officer's clubs. During all these engagements (that's a nice civilian term to apply to an Army band playing for a dance), the commanding officer seldom realized Joel was alive unless he requested (joke) a special song. Just recently Joel received an invitation for lunch at the Pentagon which a number of upper bracket officers attended. S'funny how just changing the cut and color of your suit can also change the social standing.

We're going to promise to try to make these our last two election stories until the next election (it's rumored Dewey won't run again). Just before the election, Phil Wayne of the Carlton Congo Room, ran into an acquaintance who was a stanch Republican. Of course the topic of the evening was strictly politics. Phil was pretty well convinced that Truman had a good chance to win and was willing to back up his convictions with a little green stuff. The friend offered 10 to 1 on everything that Phil had in his pocket. 'Twas pay night and Wayne happened to have $800 on him. The friend gulped and decided that he couldn't cover that much. Came the election, the revelation, and Phil is still kicking himself around the Congo bandstand bemoaning the fact that he's going to have to support the new offspring that's expected in February out of his own pocket.

The other, and final, we hope, election story comes from Olmsted's. In December at a stag party in Olmsted's a bet popped up between Harry L. Ryan (attorney) and George T. Thompson (radio attorney). Ryan bet $1000 even money that Truman would be re-elected. The payoff came the other night when Thompson paid off at another stag party with a $1000 check.

The Crossroads has been doing business wonders since Al Smith took it over. From a not-too-popular roadhouse it's become a presenter of top talent. Maurice Rocco had a whirlwind engagement there and the management is trying to book him back again. Dolly Dawn will open there November 23.

Are you reading General Eisenhower's story?
It's running exclusively in The Post.

A friendly warning on a frosty morning!

When the geese head South, that's the time for you to head for the nearest Conoco station . . . and a change to winter-grade Conoco Nth Motor Oil.

The pay-off will come on the first frosty morning. A touch of your toe to the starter sends free-flowing Nth on its way through your engine. That's because lighter, freer-flowing winter-grade Nth is specially refined to help eliminate balky, grinding starts . . . to save wear on your battery.

And Nth pays off all winter long. A special added ingredient fastens an extra film of lubricant so closely to your engine's working parts that metal surfaces are actually OIL-PLATED. This OIL-PLATING stays up on cylinder walls . . . won't all drain down, even overnight. That's why you get extra protection from "dry" friction starts . . . from sludge and carbon due to wear.

So make a change for the better. Right now . . . this minute . . . this morning . . .

Make a date to Oil-Plate!

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THE REDSKINS need a successful operation in Philadelphia on Sunday to stay alive in the Eastern Division title race, and only the ultraoptimists can like their chances to survive the 60-minute clinic with the Eagles.

POVICH

The last seen of the Eagles in Washington a month ago they were ruthlessly engaged in walloping the Redskins, 45-0, and since then the Messrs. Steve Van Buren and Tommy Thompson have gone on to lead the league in their respective running and passing specialties.

That pair lost none of its sharpness in its last outing—against the Boston Yanks. Van Buren personally gained more than 100 yards for the fourth consecutive game, and Thompson found time to chuck four touchdown passes. He is now outpitching Sammy Baugh, according to the NFL ratings, which label Thompson No. 1 and Baugh No. 3.

And with Van Buren leading the league's ground gainers by a wide margin, the sorry contrasting fact is that the Redskins don't boast a runner among the league's 14 top men. That's partly traceable, though, to the fact that the Redskins have no workhorse of the likes of Van Buren, and distribute their running attack among six backs.

THE EVIDENCE is, however, that the Redskins are an improved team since their October engagement with the Eagles. If that one is remembered correctly, the Eagles scored the first four times they gained possession of the ball, to run up a 28-0 lead and leave the Redskins impossibly in the ruck. That was the 'Skins' last defeats though. They've been doing better, with four wins in a row.

Three of those victories were against Boston and Detroit, the two last-place clubs, but the other was a convincing win over the Packers, who last week held the Bears to 7-6. Sammy Baugh was never sharper than in his recent outings and Redskin fans will never concede that Thompson is a better passer. But against the Eagles, Baugh will be meeting up again with Al Wistert, the big tackle, who Sammy recently confessed rushed him more than any other lineman in the league.

Much of the Eagles' success is traceable to their wonderful ability to control the ball and the value of Van Buren's ability to make first downs when needed. Unless the Redskins score from kickoffs, they may get little chance to mount any scoring drives.

THERE'S NO MYSTERY to the Eagles' division leadership over the second-place Redskins. The figures show the Eagles to be a better offensive club and far more unyielding on defense, where they have their greatest margin. In the eight games both clubs have played, the Eagles have surrendered only 77 points to the 135 scored against the Redskins.

To draw the picture finer, the Eagles' pass defense has held the opposition to a .39 percentage of passes completed while the Redskins have allowed 42 per cent completions. The Redskin defenses have been whacked for 135 first downs, the Eagles for only 107. Twenty of the Redskins' passes have been intercepted, only 15 of the Eagles. The opposition has run to 67 first downs against Washington, only 42 against Philadelphia's good line.

It is the Redskins' flanks that always catch it against the Eagles. Coach Greasy Neale traditionally makes his T-formation running game go to the outside better than the originators, the Bears, ever did. If Tommy Thompson's ball handling and wide-pitchouts were not so consistently successful, the Eagles' attack could be called reckless.

THE BAUGH-THOMPSON duel ought to be a beaut. It always is. Years ago when Thompson was throwing the ball for Tulsa, Baugh himself in a syndicated article predicted that Tommy would be a shining light in the pro league, tabbing him the best of the college passers. Baugh has completed 32 more passes than Thompson this season, but with 13 Baugh tosses intercepted against only 6 interceptions off Thompson, the Eagles guy gets top rating.

Redskin strategy against the Eagles is predictable enough. They saw enough of that Eagle line last month to dally little with a running game. As always in the tough games, Baugh uses the Redskin ball carriers merely to contract the defenses for his passes. And with Dick Todd at his best, and Steve Bagarus available, he never had better passing targets.

The Eagles, though, not only have Thompson and Van Buren going for them, but Bosh Prichard, too. And in Washington last month, Prichard was the best football player on the field. Joe Muha plays for the Eagles, too. The suspicion is they have too many good football players for the Redskins.

10 Area Boys Fire Hoyas For Colonials

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Georgetown's perennial lament is that its football players just don't seem to take ancient-rival George Washington seriously.

This Saturday at Griffith Stadium things may be different for the 18th renewal of the series that dates back to 1890. The Hoya squad has 10 self-appointed cheerleaders.

The 10 all live in the District and they know just how intolerable it will be to continue living here if GW ends Georgetown's undefeated streak against them.

Of the 10 local residents, three will be playing their last game for the Hoyas—Elmer Raba, Tony Beyer and Jim Nalls.

Raba Turns Tosser

Raba, ostensibly a defensive back, has been versatile enough to toss touchdown passes in the last two games. Beyer, a pre-med student who finds it difficult to get to practices, is considered the No. 1 back on defense.

Tony, too, has stepped out of character—against NYU he started a one-man scoring march that covered 35 yards in four hard line smashes. Nalls, Gonzaga product, is a good guard.

Raba, who enters dental school in the fall, summed up the Washingtonians' feelings. "The rest of the boys have to get 'up' for this one for us.

"We've been telling them what a scrappy bunch GW has. It's going to be as tough a game as we've had all year."

The others passing on the message are Tackles Phil Funk and Jim O'Keefe; Guards Paul Wintermeyer and Joe Hitselberger; End Harvey Lowe and the Hughes brothers, Johnny and George, backs.

Hagerty—"I'm Scared"

Their work will be appreciated no little by Coach Jack Hagerty. The graying Mr. Hagerty (and GW has had more than a little to do with his hair changing shade) admits frankly, "I'm scared to death over Saturday's game."

He should be. Certainly no one is more aware than Hagerty just how tough the Colonials can get. His undefeated 1939 team had to settle for a 7-0 victory and got its lone touchdown on a 76-yard punt return by Al Matuza.

The following year, when Georgetown's unbeaten string of 23 games finally was ended by Boston College in that memorable 19-18 game, G. W. proved equally hard to impress, succumbing by only 8-0.

And just last year, the Colonials, who had won only one start, scored their second scoreless tie against 15 defeats in 17 meetings with Georgetown.

Boston, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—James Murray, a baseball and a football scout for the Brooklyn Dodgers, was named today as president of the Scranton, Pa., baseball team of the Eastern League.

Gorgeous George Smells Up the Joint In What's Called Wrestling at Turner's

By Sy Fishbein
Post Reporter

Tonight's the night Turner's Arena gets fumigated.

The homey barn on W street, sweating rosin and liniment these many years, will be filled, probably to suffocation, by the dulcet fragrance of the sweetest smelling wrestler who ever growled—Gorgeous George of Hollywood.

Flanked by an entourage which includes Jeffries, his man of all primping, 88 surrealist bathrobes (though he may not be wearing them all), atomizers loaded with his private brand of catnip, and a pate full of blond hair artfully curled and tacked up—George will make his Washington debut against Marvin Mercer, a plain wrestler from Boston.

A pregrunt glamour ritual with all those props each playing a part will attract a flock of couturiers, fashion experts, spying parfumeurs, jealous females with straight hair, and maybe a few wrestling fans, even.

The Turner management, smelling, among other things, a sellout, has asked all holders of reservations to get there early. There's no telling what may show up from Paris yowling for seats.

Lucky insiders will get an additional thrill earlier today when Ooh La La keeps a rendezvous with a famous Washington hair-twister. There the long mop will get doused in peroxide and petted back into ringlets for the grand entrance.

Mercer, as yet, has given no indication as to what will happen to those luscious ringlets after he digs his perspiring paws into them, assuming he can survive the stench.

In case a few wrestling fans do show up, Turner's has provided eight unbobbed males who'll endeavor to beat each other's brains out in the orthodox manner. Paired off, they'll be Lavern Baxter against Ivan Romanoff, Bibber McCoy against Frank Hebda, Michele Leone against Francois Miquette, and Sammy Menaker against Jesse James.

West, Jackson Meet for D. C. Title Tonight

A furious home town rivalry will be unveiled at Uline Arena tonight when Sonny BoBy West, fast rising local youth, meets dangerous Stonewall Jackson in a scheduled 12-round District lightweight championship boxing bout.

A championship belt will be given the winner of the first District title battle since 1937 and the eleventh since the sport was legalized locally in 1934.

West originally was quoted an 8-5 favorite, but the odds had been reduced to 6-5 and take your choice last night. Jackson won hosts of followers in Baltimore a few months ago when he entered a bout with Sonny Boy installed the 5-1 choice and beat him on a decision.

Frank "Blinky" Palermo, manager of world lightweight champion Ike Williams, has promised Promoter Goldie Ahearn that he will consider matching Williams with tonight's winner in a non-title bout at Uline Arena on December 8 if sufficient interest is shown in tonight's fight.

West, a rare combination boxer and puncher, today is considered one of the greatest, young prospects among the 135-pounders. He gained a national ranking when he defeated Jimmy McAllister for the second time in three starts recently and won handily over Jimmy Carter in his last Baltimore start. Carter boxed a draw with world's featherweight champion Sandy Saddler here a year ago last summer.

Tonight's scheduled five-round semi-final pits Julian Keene against Art Bethea, a local middleweight. Four round bouts list: Frank Ball vs. Ray Adanges, lightweights; Slugger White vs. Puggy Lyons, lightweights, and Ben Harrison vs. Don Wagner, heavyweights.

In the first race, King Zuncho paid $145.80 to win, $49.40 to place and $28.90 to show. Jimmie Nichols was in the saddle.

Maria Del Ora paid $124.10, $37.60 and $20.40 in winning the second race, with Jockey Allan Gray up. Tanforan has no daily-double payoff.

W &M Asked To Delta Bowl

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 16 (AP). William and Mary has been extended an invitation to participate in the New Year's Day Delta Bowl football game at Memphis.

William P. Brady, president of the Delta Bowl Classic Association, said the invitation was sent last night and that he has not received a reply.

For some days William and Mary has loomed as a strong possibility for a bid to the Delta Bowl. It is the team that held North Carolina to a 7-7 tie this season.

Catholic Tackle Breaks His Leg

Catholic University's hopes for a successful season finale Saturday against Lock Haven took a dive yesterday when X-rays revealed that Tackle Henry MacDonald's leg is fractured.

MacDonald was hurt in the Washington College game and is through for the year. He'll be replaced by Nick Orsini in Saturday's joust with Lock Haven.

Utah 'Pretty Sure' of Jan. 1 Game—5 Bowls Want Them

Salt Lake City, Nov. 15 (AP).—The University of Utah has a pretty good chance of winding up in one of the Nation's football bowls New Year's Day.

The once-beaten, once-tied Utes have only received "feelers" to the Harbor, Delta, Raisin, Salad and Camellia Bowls, according to the Salt Lake Tribune.

The Tribune said the most serious gesture had been extended by officials of the Delta Bowl in Memphis, Tenn.

(Coach Ike Armstrong said Utah has received several bowl feelers but had not received a bid by any bowl organization. He declined to comment on whether Utah would accept until a definite invitation is received.)

Walter Stewart, sports writer of the Memphis Commercial-Appeal, told the Tribune in a telephone conversation that he would strongly recommend that Utah be invited to the Delta Bowl.

"I believe that Utah is amenable to an invitation and their solid record marks the Utes as a good box-office attraction and a worthy opponent for whomever else the committee will select," Stewart told the Tribune.

William and Mary, the team which held North Carolina to a 7-7 tie, loomed as a strong possibility as the other team in the classic, the Tribune said it was informed.

The Tribune also reported that Utah was high on the list of preferred elevens for the Harbor Bowl in San Diego.

Utah is undefeated in Skyline Six conference play this year. The Utes lost the season opener to Southern California, then won seven in a row before their 20-20 tie with Oregon State Saturday.

GW and Davis Welcome Back Blocker Burak

George Washington's 190-pound battering ram, Stan Burak, will be in shape to play on offense against Georgetown Saturday, and that's good news to Andy Davis.

"Stan's return means that I'll have an extra second to get off my passes," said the Nation's twelfth ranking passer yesterday at G.W.'s secret practice hideaway.

A blocking back, par excellence, Burak missed the Duke game last Saturday after playing 56 minutes in each of the first eight Colonial games. He was injured in The Citadel game two weeks ago.

"And we really missed him," chimed in Coach Bo Rowland. "Burak is one of the best backs I've ever seen. He does everything just right. If I were to chose an All-America blocking back, I'd pick Burak."

Ref Lauds Burak

Orrel Mitchell, prominent Southern Conference referee, referred to Burak "as the most valuable player on the GW squad" after the Colonials' 20-12 upset of Virginia.

"That number 33 had his team jumping with his chatter, and he put on one of the greatest blocking jobs I've ever seen. Without him, Davis wouldn't have done a thing," said Mitchell of Burak.

Those are high compliments for a fellow who was a defensive end before this season.

In spring practice, Rowland shifted him to blocking back, and that was the smartest move Bo has made at GW.

Won't Play Defense

That Virginia game was probably Stan's best, but his greatest single play came in the VMI defeat. He bumped three Keydet potential tacklers out of Al Dugoff's way as Al raced 80 yards for a touchdown on a kickoff return.

Because his leg still hasn't fully recovered, Stan will not be used on defense. End Bill Szanyi and Center Johnny Grinnell will probably be used as line backers.

The atmosphere in the G. W. camp is of high optimism, but Coach Bo Rowland is careful not to make any predications on the outcome.

"I don't want to say anything that'll get that Georgetown crowd mad. They might paste my statement on their bulletin board. Let's let sleeping dogs lie," said the coach. "We'll show up Saturday that's all."

National Rifle Range Opened to Public

The National Rifle Association announces that its rifle range is open to the public six days a week. The range is located at 10 G st. ne., over the Mayflower Garage. For one dollar an hour the range will provide all equipment for rifle and pistol target shooting.

Terps Drop To Fourth in Pass Defense

New York, Nov. 16.—Maryland's 49-20 trouncing by North Carolina Saturday cost the Old Liners more than just loss of face.

According to National Collegiate Athletic Bureau figures, announced today, Maryland dropped from first to fourth nationally in pass defense, and from seventh to tenth in total offense.

The Terp pass defense allowed the Tar Heels to complete seven out of 15 for 82 yards, and fell behind Richmond, Northwestern and Brigham Young, in the ratings.

Although the Maryland offense was able to roll up 349 yards, its average fell to 269.3 yards per game.

Otherwise, the Terps held their own in team statistics. They held their ranking of second in total defense, and seventh in rushing offense.

Other Southern Conference teams listed in the N. C. A. B. statistics are William and Mary, eighth in punting with a 40.8 average, and Richmond, fifteenth in total defense with a 196.6 average yield.

In individual statistics, George Washington's Andy Davis was still Washington, D. C.'s, biggest threat. Although he played in less than half of the Duke game Saturday, Davis remained fourth in total offense and twelfth in passing.

Maryland's Vic Turyn climbed five notches to fifteenth place in total offense.

Davis has gained a net 1138 yards, 69 less than third ranking Charlie Justice of North Carolina, and 708 less than the leader, Stan Heath of Nevada.

In the passing department, Davis has 59 completions for 130 efforts for 841 yards and 3 touchdowns. Heath leads with 121 for 210 and 20 touchdowns.

Turyn has accounted for 908 yards to rank in total offense.

Jack Talbert, Tech Grad, Uses Name Of Swiggard

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Woodrow Wilson High School forfeited all its football games yesterday after learning that its star blocking back, masquerading under an assumed name, was a 1947 graduate of McKinley Tech.

The 19-year-old player, "Jack Swiggard," last year was second-string wingback on the Interhigh championship Tech team. In 1947, he played under his real name, Jack Talbert.

Wilson Football Coach Joe Carlo said that he was notified of Swiggard's dual identity by the Scholastic Sports Association, a group of local high school reporters.

He Says He Is Sorry

The S. S. A. showed Carlo a photograph of last year's Tech team and pointed out the resemblance of Talbert to Swiggard. Carlo called the youngster down to the office, and asked him if he knew Talbert.

Swiggard admitted that he was Talbert. He said, "I'm sorry."

Carlo immediately consulted Wilson Principal Thomas J. Holmes. They decided to write letters forfeiting Interhigh League games to Eastern, McKinley Tech and Coolidge, teams that Wilson has beaten this season.

Strangely enough, Swiggard played the full game against his former Tech teammates, and escaped the recognition of his former coach, Ed Solomon.

The boy was dropped from school.

Solomon Begins Check-up

After the game, one of the Tech players remarked to Solomon that Swiggard has a marked resemblance to Talbert. Solomon began a private investigation, which, he said last night, he hadn't quite completed.

"Frankly, I'm surprised at Talbert's audacity," said Solomon. "He was a very nice fellow. He almost got away with it, didn't he?"

It was learned that Talbert planned to enroll at Clemson College last summer with Bugs Thompson, Jim McCauley and Glen Smith, other stars of last year's Tech team. But he changed his mind, and enrolled at Wilson High instead.

He tried out for guard on the Wilson team, but was shifted to the blocking back position where he did very well. He broke his hand in the Eastern game, but came back the following week to play against Western.

The forfeitures move Eastern into a tie with Anacostia for second place in the Interhigh race with 5-2 records. Tech's record is 4-2, and that team has a chance to also tie for second by beating Coolidge Friday.

This shift in standings could make the league race complicated, if league-leading Central is upset by Western Friday. A three-way playoff for second place would be necessitated. And the winner would play Central for the Interhigh championship.

Pros May Sign Heath, Bell Says

Philadelphia, Nov. 16 (AP).—Commissioner Bert Bell of the National Football League said today that Stan Heath, passing star for the University of Nevada, will be eligible to play in the AFL next season "if he so chooses."

The commissioner said he received a wire from Coach Joe Sheetetski of Nevada stating that Heath would have "no more eligibility left at Nevada" after next June.

Eagles Rule Heavy Choice Over 'Skins

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

The Washington Redskins will be 14-point underdogs when they take on the Eagles in Philadelphia Sunday with the eastern division lead of the National Football League at stake . . . The official odds were set yesterday, conceding if nothing else a lot of improvement in the Washington forces . . . Earlier in the season the Eagles had a 14-point lead after the first period and romped to a 45-0 victory.

Head Coach Turk Edwards has made only one important change in the Skins' defense for Sunday's game . . . 232-pound Jim Peebles, their kickoff specialist and ordinarily an end, will be shifted to a tackle slot to give the team "more mobility" . . . The big wingman is fast enough and can easily be spared from his end chores . . . Steve (Buggsy) Bagarus' sore toe is healed completely, and End Herb Shoener and Halfback Howie Livingston are ready to go . . . At yesterday's practice scampering Eddie Saenz, who had a broken ankle, turned in his best running since West Coast drills . . .

AFTER-ALL DEPARTMENT: Say what you will about Washington's chances, they'd be less than nil without the two old men in Room 514 of the Roosevelt Hotel . . . The two transplanted Texans, a couple of buddies who still wear cowboy boots and boast the same age, 34, could wreck the Redskins by grabbing a plane for their respective ranches . . . Their names? . . . Slingin' Sammy Baugh and Dick (Lil Ol' Boy) Todd, who comprise one of the best passing combinations of all time.

Cooper Boxes LeBrun Again

One of Gabe Menendez' more inspired pieces of matchmaking will return to Turner's Arena next Monday night when Washington's favorite featherweight, Jimmy Cooper, gets another crack at Canadian Leo LeBrun.

Young Cooper dropped a tight decision to the veteran LeBrun a few weeks back in a high-speed affair which impressed local fans.

A complicated weave, which ultimately confounded Cooper, has sent LeBrun into the top feather ranks. The style works well even against more experienced battlers than Cooper, having helped LeBrun to impressive victories over Jose Cardenas, Frankie Pucci, Rocky Progano and Frankie Gromada.

And it even made LeBrun look good in losing a decision to dynamite-fisted Willie Pep.

Cooper thinks he learned something since LeBrun outfoxed him and jumped at the chance when Menendez suggested the return bout recently.

22 Former Eastern Boys Play Sunday In Metro Game

Twenty-two former Eastern High School players will represent Eastern Division Champion Northeast Body Works when it opposes Brookland-Woodridge Merchants, of the western division, in the Metropolitan Amateur Football League's 160-pound championship playoff game at Griffith Stadium Sunday at 12.30 p.m.

In the unlimited playoff that follows Car Credit, eastern division champion, take on Anacostia Eagles, of the western division.

Post Reporter

Bowie, Md., Nov. 16.—A three-horse blanket finish was featured in the $3500 Roques Regiment, featured sixth race here today, and the camera gave the nod to William Ziegler, jr's.' Curtain's Up, an outsider, at $17.60 for $2.

In the middle of the three-horse span, Curtain's Up won by a nose from E. A. Nicodemus' Laran, who was the same slim margin in front of Brookmeade Stable's Lucky Devil. The latter raced nearest the camera, while Laran, the 9-to-5 choice, was hemmed in along the rail.

Ridden by veteran Vincent Nodarse, Curtain's Up was in front at the furlong marker and stuck it out gamely to win. Many spectators called Laran as the winner before the official finish was flashed on the infield board. All members of the eight-horse field were dead tired at the end and Curtain's Up merely outgamed his opponents.

The Southern Maryland Agricultural Association's racing strip remained in a fast condition, but the time for the mile and sixteenth was only 1:46 1/5, two full seconds slower than the track mrak for the distance.

Although bright sunshine and a comfortable breeze, which drifted into the stands from across the centerfield, made for perfect racing weather, only 7000 fans were on tap for the third program of the 13-day meeting and the wagering was light.

Curtain's Up was beaten by several of his rivals in the Charles Purse when he finished second and then sixth in two starts at Pimlico. Therefore, he had only a few scattered backers for today's race and his win was a mild form reversal.

First Win This Year

The 4-year-old son of Pompey and Soft Light was fifth on the first turn, moved up gradually under Nodarse's hand ride from the half-mile pole to the furlong marker and then was under a strong drive in the final eighth when he felt the sting of the whip. It was his first win in 10 starts this year.

There was a pre-race battle for the favorite role between Laran and Mrs. S. M. Pistorio's Golden Bull, but the former finally went off as the choice. Golden Bull took the lead at the three-quarter pole and was in command until the ultimate winner turned him at the head of the lane. This Maryland-bred racer tired in the lane and finished fourth.

Isadore Bieber's Flaming Lady took a nose decision in the seventh race, just getting up to beat Undercut in the mile and a sixteenth race.

Returning $9 straight, Flaming Lady gave Apprentice Clarence Picou his second win of the afternoon.

Picou rode his first winner in the third race aboard Brookmeade Stable's Sunny Vale, a $4.60 favorite. He brought the daughter of Eighty Thirty from off the pace to win going away. H. T. Darling's Duke's Gale was second with W. T. Leatherbury's Vagrant Cloud the pacemaker, third.

The daily double on the 9 and 9 combination paid $39.40. W. L. Brann's Pictoric won the first race at $6.20 and Mrs. M. E. Murphy's Okamsel took the second at $9.60.

Midget Track Gets Face-Lifting For Thursday

A new face-lifting job will be done on the indoor track at Uline Arena tomorrow night when midget automobile racing enters its third week at 8:30 o'clock.

Director Tom Lane last night announced that riffle boards are being installed at the ends to prevent the drivers from taking short cuts. The turns are being widened and the straightaways reduced.

Ed "Dutch" Schaefer, one of the outstanding little car pilots of the East, is scheduled to make his debut tomorrow night. The Flying Dutchman is a veteran indoor competitor, and will introduce a cycle motor car.

Only four machines will be raced in four qualifying heats of 10 laps each; six of the two 12-lap semi-finals, and eight each in the 15-lap consolation and 25-lap feature events.

Because of Polio

Little Hoyas May Lose Title Chance

A precautionary move against spread of polio may force undefeated Georgetown Prep football team to forfeit its chance to play for the District championship December 4.

The school was closed yesterday for two weeks because two students were stricken. The team was disbanded for the same length of time, and this Friday's Georgetown Prep-Gonzaga game postponed indefinitely.

Father Dugan, Prep's moderator of athletics, said last night that the game would probably be canceled because Gonzaga has no open date before the big championship game.

Gonzaga plays St. John's November 25. Prep's team will not reorganize until November 29, and the championship game is five days later.

With Georgetown Prep out of the way, the St. John's-Gonzaga winner will meet the Interhigh titlist.

Georgetown Prep was the likeliest team to represent the prep schools against the Interhigh champion at Griffith Stadium. It is the city's only remaining undefeated team, while St. John's and Gonzaga have each lost two. St. John's also has been tied twice.

The two youngsters stricken are Lawrence Kennedy of Mount Kisco, N. Y., and Henry O'Brien of Pittsburgh, both members of Georgetown Prep's junior varsity football team.

They became ill last week, and were taken to Georgetown University Hospital. With news of the two boys' illness, parents began withdrawing their children from classes. Because of the great number of absences, it was decided to close the school until November 29.

Plaque Marks Babe's Last Homer

Pittsburgh, Nov. 16 (AP).—Babe Ruth's last home run—hit at Forbes Field—has been memoralized by a plaque.

The plaque, erected today, bears this inscription:

(Babe Ruth (1895-1948) hit the last home run of his career while playing with the Boston Braves versus the Pittsburgh Pirates on Saturday, May 25, 1935, at Forbes Field.

"The home run, 714th of Ruth's career, cleared the right field stands at this point."

Emmet Aids Landing of July Event

Frank Emmet was the happiest guy in town last night when word came from New York that the 1949 National Junior championship would be held at Washington's Congressional Country Club.

After 20 years spent nurturing young District golfers, rewarded only by the personal satisfaction derived from watching youngsters develop, Emmet has the most important junior event in the country on tap for July 27-30 of next year.

Negotiations came to a successful conclusion yesterday after Congressional Country Club members had voted Monday night to offer their course. The national body replied affirmatively within 24 hours.

Selection of a course had been the major difficulty encountered in months of work by local officials. Emmet had broached the subject originally last August when he escorted six local youngsters to the first National Junior at Ann Arbor, Mich.

Hoyas Offer Housing

At first the USGA offered 1950 to Washington. Later, near the end of September, the 1949 tournament bid came in, catching local officials unprepared.

Since then, Emmet; Dr. Robert A. Kielty, regional USGA representative; Martin McCarthy and Albert Steinem of the District Golf Association have been working furiously to find a course.

Housing facilities, a major problem nowadays, proved no obstacle at all as Georgetown University stepped forward with a generous offer to accommodate the 128 boys who'll qualify for the match play.

3 Local Boys Figure

Dean Lind of Rockford, Ill.; last year's winner, will be ineligible to compete since he's over 18.

Of all the local youngsters under his wing, Emmet thinks at least three have enough class to figure prominently next year. They are Dick Foster, 17, second low qualifier nationally in 1947, and two cousins, Billy, 15, and Bobby Wolfe, 17, who also made the trip to Ann Arbor last year.

Emmet looms as the logical and all but unanimous choice to head up the local committee in charge of arrangements when it is formed next week.

Garden's 6-Day Bike Mark Likely To Fall Here

Faster times than ever were recorded in Madison Square Garden will be in prospect for the International Six-Day Bike Race to be held November 28-December 4 in the District of Columbia National Guard Armory.

An eight-laps-to-the-mile wooden track will be installed in the huge local drill hall, whereas the Garden mile requires 10 laps.

The larger circumference of the big oval to be laid here provides longer straightaways, and thus gives opportunity for the riders to hit higher speeds.

Eighteen stars, mostly Europeans, are here in training. Gustav Kilian of Luxembourg, co-holder of the world's record for most successive six-day triumphs—nine—is recovering in Georgtown University Hospital from an attack of pneumonia and is thought likely to be able to compete in the forthcoming event.

New Basketball Loop Holds Meeting Thursday

A new basketball league of unlimited amateur teams will hold a managers' meeting on Thursday at 8 p. m. at the Greenbelt High School. Teams in the league are Naval Ordnance Laboratory, Jet Motors, McKee Pontiac and Randall House. Any team interested in joining the league is invited to the meeting. For information call Greenbelt 6966.

SMU-Notre Dame Plan Home-and-Home Series

Dallas, Nov. 16 (AP).—Coach Matty Bell of Southern Methodist University said today negotiations are under way for a home-and-home football agreement between SMU aand Notre Dame.

"We have tentatively agreed to a home-and-home arrangement," Bell said, "but there is the matter of working out dates suitable to both schools. We are trying to bring Notre Dame to Dallas in 1949, with SMU going to South Bend, Ind., or a site to be named by the Notre Dame officials, in either 1950 or 1951."

Iowa Fans Charge Bierman Couldn't Take Their Ribbing

Iowa City, Iowa, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—An Iowa football fan charged today that Minnisota Coach Bernie Bierman was "sore" because fans ribbed him when he sent his son into the game.

John C. White, Johnson County attorney, said in a letter to the University of Iowa student newspaper that Bierman used abusive language to reply to "kidding remarks."

The paper, the Daily Iowan, printed a similar complaint against Bierman from John G. Ruhl, Iowa City, Iowa.

The letters were in reply to Bierman's charge, made after the Iowa-Minnesota game last Saturday, that Iowa supporters were unsportsmanlike, and I will stick by that statement."

He said the charge that he used "abusive language" was "not worthy of comment."

White said he was sending copies of his letter to President J. L. Morrill of the University of Minnesota and Kenneth (Tug) Wilson, Big Nine athletic commissioners.

White wrote that when Bierman's son entered the game, a fan shouted:

"What are you trying to do, Bernie, keep it in the family?"

"I don't talk to —,"

[The Associated Press reported that Bierman told Dr. Eddie Anderson, Iowa coach, after the game he would "never bring a team here again," because of "punishment from such a riotous crowd." According to the Associated Press, Bierman in Minneapolis said there were inaccuracies in White'ss statement.]

Royals Beat Knicks, 75-63

Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 16 (AP).—The Rochester Royals made accuracy at the foul line count heavily tonight as they defeated the New York Knickerbockers, 75 to 63, in a Basketball Association of America game.

Outscored from the field by one basket, the Royals cashed 27 of 34 penalty tosses, while the Knicks missed 17 of their 30 charity flips.

Arnie Risen, with 13, Bob Davies with 12 and Arnie Johnson with 10 points paced the Royals' offense. John (Bud) Palmer of the losers topped all scorers with 14.

Tatum Promises Drastic Changes

Coach Jim Tatum ordered the gates of Maryland's football practice field locked yesterday and then set out to teach the Terps a "new system" in preparation for Saturday's contest with Vanderbilt in Nashville.

After studying movies of Saturday's game and getting scouting reports on Vanderbilt, Sunny Jim issued this statement:

"Vanderbilt is a tougher ball club than North Carolina. Because Vanderbilt has had a lot of success against the T-formation we are going to have to change our system.

"We are going to have to make some radical changes in our offensive and defensive setup."

Trinidad Romps

Trinidad thumped Georgetown, 32-7 yesterday in a 90-pound Boys Club of Washington game on the Ellipse. Cris McCade, Trinidad's quarterback completed 10 out of 14 passes, three of them for touchdowns.

Tito Admits Soviet Economic Squeeze

Sophoulis Premier

New Cabinet Is Formed In Greece

Athens, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Former Premier Themistokles Sophoulis and former Foreign Minister Constantin Tsaldaris announced jointly tonight that a new government has been formed, with Sophoulis retaining the job of Premier.

The agreement ended two politically confused days in which both statesmen tried to form cabinets.

The crisis was precipitated when Sophoulis resigned in protest against a message from Australian Foreign Minister H. V. Evatt, speaking for the United Nations General Assembly, expressing hope the Greek war could be ended by conciliation.

The joint announcement said the new government will report to King Paul Wednesday. Tsaldaris said earlier the new cabinet will be similar in makeup to the old.

Sophoulis will be war minister as well as Premier and new ministers will be appointed for labor, agriculture, interior and welfare. Tsaldaris will continue as Foreign Minister.

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Nov. 16 (A.P.).—Premier Marshal Tito acknowledged today for the first time that Russia and her eastern European satellites are imposing an economic squeeze on Yugoslavia.

He spoke at Ljubljana on relations between countries "which are building socialism."

"One thing is not clear," he said, "and that is why in trade the peoples' democracies are taking a harder stand toward Yugoslavia than toward some capitalist countries."

The Soviet-dominated Cominform has charged that Tito and his Yugoslav Communist Party are too nationalistic, among other deviations from the Marx-Lenin line. But Tito declared:

"We have never done anything which differs from the actions of our allies in the East—that is, we did what the other peoples' democracies also did.

"Whether we are nationalists or not, I can say: We are just as nationalistic as it is necessary to be to develop among our people sound socialist patriotism."

Phone Gadget Counts Calls, Fixes Charge

Savannah, Ga., Nov. 16 (A.P.).—Pretty soon the telephone company may be sending you your bill with clockwork regularity—and they mean clockwork.

They're working on a gadget called the "automatic accounting device," which was described today by Andrew J. Zimmerman, public service commissioner for the State of Washington.

Zimmerman said this gadget would make a note every time you picked up your telephone, the number you called and how long you talked.

At the end of the month, he said, the thing will compute your bill. It will not record your conversation.

Zimmerman also declared Americans are just about to talk each other's ears off.

Every day, he told the National Association of Railroad and Utility Commissioners' convention here American indulge in 154 million conversations over 37,350,000 telephones.

Myron Cowen Named To Far East Mission

Myron Melvin Cowen of New York was appointed by President Truman yesterday as a United States representative on the Economic Mission for Asia and the Far East.

The Economic Co-operation Administration yesterday announced the appointment of George H. Knutsen of Washington as chief of its machinery and equipment branch and as executive chairman of the projects committee in the industry division.

District Government Plans For Civil Defense Program

ing regular police during emergencies.

The Commissioners said only that they were withholding a decision pending "further study," but indications were they would await a recommendation from General Young on the over-all civil defense program, and also from Gasch, who is scheduled to attend a national meeting of State officials to discuss similar organizations.

Gasch, who is general counsel of the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin, will address the Council of State Agencies on water pollution control legislation at the Detroit meeting December 1.

He will accompany James C. Wilkes of Washington, chairman of the Council's Committee on Uniform State Laws.

The convention is scheduled to discuss the civil defense report, which included model State acts for establishing the sweeping program, as well as outlines for suggested municipal ordinances. The District government probably will decide to ask for legislation conforming to that recommended in the States, District officials said last night.

Missing B-17 'Ditched' Off Philippines

Tokyo, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—The United States Air Force today located one four-engine bomber, missing for several hours over the Celebes Sea, but abandoned hope of rescuing the crew of the B-29 which vanished 10 days ago off Okinawa.

Thirteenth Air Force headquarters in Manila announced that the missing B-17 had been sighted late today by a commercial plane. The bomber had been "ditched" in 10 feet of water off southern Luzon in the Philippines, and the 12-man crew apparently escaped serious injury.

At the same time, Far East Air Force headquarters here said the search for 12 men aboard the missing Superfortress had been "officially declared ended."

U. S. Issues Warrants for 9 Smuggling Arms to Israel

Miami, Fla., Nov. 16 (A.P.).—Warrants for the arrest of nine persons accused of being members of an international ring of smugglers which has been furnishing bombers and guns to Israeli forces were mailed to widely scattered sections of the country today.

Five of the accused are Californians, although two names are believed nonexistent persons created by the ring as aliases for members.

Twenty-one others were named by a Federal grand jury as co-conspirators, but they are not to be brought to trial.

The nine are specifically charged with transporting three B-17 Flying Fortresses to Palestine on June 11, 1948. Also transported was a Constellation which later crashed after flying 10 missions. They are also charged with arranging for transportation of four A-20 attack bombers which were seized at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., last August.

Chester A. Emerick, chief of the Customs Service here, said Charles T. Winters of Miami and San Juan, Puerto Rico, charged with arranging the flight of the three B-17's and accompanying them to Zatec, Czechoslovakia, had surrendered through attorneys. He said bond of $10,000 probably would be set for Winters Wednesday.

Soviet Accused Of Subsidizing French Strikes

Paris, Nov. 16 (A.P.).—Interior Minister Jules Moch declared in the National Assembly today that Russia, through the Cominform, has put up $920,000 for strikes in France.

He said Russia ordered the present wave of strikes in France in an effort to wreck the European Recovery Program. He added that today he ordered the expulsion of Two Russians, two Czechs and two Poles who had been involved in distributing the strike money.

He said a bank in Paris headed by a nationalized Russian has given at least $226,000 to keep Communist newspapers in France going.

The Interior Minister spoke in a debate demanded by critics who asked for proof of his earlier assertions that the six-week coal strike was ordered by the Communist Information Bureau.

Communists listened to his charges in silence. The major strike this fall, the coal strike, still is in swing with output only 65 per cent of normal.

Communist union leaders are polling France's 25,000 dockworkers on a general unlimited strike that may be ordered Wednesday.

The Communists say the mopey they have received from Eastern Europe comes from workers sympathetic to the French strikes. The Communist newspaper L'Humanite today said Russian miners had sent $32,960.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Klutz

This is the story of another veteran's insurance case that has been fouled up in the red tape of the Veterans Administration. An appeal has been sent to the President, urging his intercession in it.

It will be one year Thursday since Lieut. (j. g.) Scott Irvin Brear, a Navy flier, was killed when his attack plane crashed into the ocean near Key West, Fla.

The flier held a $10,000 VA National Service Life Insurance policy. His father and mother, both of whom predeceased him, were named the beneficiaries. However, in his will, he left everything to his widow and 2-year-old baby, who haven't been able to collect a dime from VA. The President was told in a letter:

"We have been trying by all means that are at our disposal to colleect from the VA this insurance.

"Endless and complicated forms have been filled out, birth, death, and marriage certificates submitted in endless procession, letters written which have remained unanswered for months at a time, certified copies of the decedent's will submitted, forms filled out showing every conceivable relative of Lieutenant Brear to the nth degree, although his will as probated gave his entire estate to his wife.

"We have repeatedly written to VA and submitted promptly every paper, every form, every certificate, every document which it has requested. We are still unable to collect this insurance.

"The widow has no means of support and is unemployed. She is in dire and desperate need and absolutely dependent upon the insurance solemnly contracted for between her husband and the United States Government. It is due solely to the inefficient and dilatory conduct of VA that this intolerable condition exists."

The letter to the President was written by Henry C. Remick, a Philadelphia attorney and a veteran himself who is Mrs. Brear's cousin. The lawyer, who also holds a VA policy, told the President:

"The possibility that this insurance may never be collected by my estate or that it may be collected so long after my death that the beneficiaries are unable to enjoy it makes me loath to continue it. Such, I am sure, would be the attitude of all veterans who carry this insurance if it is always as difficult to collect as I have found it."

The widow and her baby are living with a sister-in-law near Philadelphia. She sought the President's help after he read in this column of the plight of another veteran's widow, Mrs. John S. Power of this city, and dynamited VA into action on her insurance claim.

MRS. KATHRYN S. POWER

After long months of delay because of Government red tape, Mrs. John S. Power of 3432 Baker st. ne., yesterday received a Treasury check for $1057.10.

It was the first payment on National Service Life Insurance due her since the death of her husband, an Army veteran, in a Paris plane crash last January 6. The husband was serving as a civilian economist with the American Military Government overseas.

PS: I've received scores of similar complaints after my story on the Power case—complaints against both the VA and the inadequate system of employes compensation. I'll continue to pound away at them, but the remedy lies in the President's order to Federal agencies for suggestions that will do away with the needless and unnecessary delays in getting money to people that rightfully belongs to them.

PARKING: This is the story behind the crackdown on some Army and Navy people who park at the Pentagon:

Nineteen persons—15 civilians and 4 officers—have been found with bogus parking stickers on their cars. In general, these people "doctored" their stickers to enable them to park in lanes near the large building.

An investigation was ordered when it was rumored a ring was selling counterfeit parking stickers. However, no evidence to support the charge has been found.

One of the accused officers, it was learned, has been recommended for court-martial. A civilian employe is reported to have submitted "voluntarily" to a lie-detector test after he disclaimed any knowledge of the alleged counterfeit ring. Meantime, the inquiry is being carried forward by the Army's criminal investigators. So, be sure and park in your assigned place.

2 Policemen Accused of Robbing Store

Two Arlington police privates yesterday were accused of breaking into a supermarket while on duty. They were suspended from the force and released in $1000 bond each.

The men, Louie L. Liptrap, 24, and Charles H. James, 28, were charged with housebreaking with intent to commit larceny.

Both told The Washington Post yesterday that the charges against them were "all wrong." James has been on the force more than six years. Liptrap joined the department in November, 1946.

They face an Arlington County Court hearing at 9:30 a. m. today.

Police Chief Harry L. Woodyard said the Acme Supermarket at 4717 Lee hwy., Arlington, was entered. He gave this account:

About 4 a.m. yesterday, Police Sergt. R. S. Cole, making a routine check of his night detail, discovered the two policemen at the rear of the supermarket, their scout car nearby.

Cole said the rear supermarket door had been forced. He said he found a quantity of groceries, meats, and butter in the trunk of the scout car.

After questioning James and Liptrap, according to the police chief, Sergt. Cole said he got an admission from the two that they had broken in and taken the groceries.

James, who lives at 2300 Lee hwy., is married and has two children. He makes $3200 a year as a police private.

Liptrap also is married, has one child and expects another soon. He makes $2772, lives at 1927 S. 12th st., Arlington.

Pvt. Liptrap, asked to comment on his arrest, said it was a "pretty bad thing when a police officer can't make a routine check of a place" without being accused of housebreaking.

Pvt. James said the police account of the episode was "all wrong," and declined further comment.

Conviction on the housebreaking charge carries a maximum penalty of 10 years in the penitentiary, and a maximum fine of $500.

Clark Gets Playground Rule Opinion

An opinion by Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West on control of 62 playgrounds here was approved yesterday by District Commissioners and ordered sent to Attorney General Tom C. Clark.

Clark is already studying a brief prepared by Interior Department Solicitor Mastin G. White that the department's National Park Service should control the play areas.

The District government brief, which follows the position of the Recreation Board and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, is that the playgrounds were purchased with District funds and have been under control of the local government since purchase.

The decision as to whether the playgrounds will continue on the present District-sponsored segregated basis or change to the Federal nonsegregated policy hinges on determination by Clark of who has control.

Board of Recreation Abolition Advocated

The Central Northwest Citizens Association last night unanimously adopted a resolution calling for abolition of the District Board of Recreation and for placing its functions under the Department of the Interior.

Meeting at the Garnett Patterson Junior High School, 10th and U sts. nw., the association also voted to send a letter of commendation to the Rev. Dr. A. Powell Davis, pastor of All Souls' Unitarian Church, for his recommendation to President Truman that a Negro be appointed a member of the Cabinet.

New officers elected at last night's meeting include Richard F. Ware, president; Miss Helen Moore, vice president; Miss Etelka Wade, recording secretary, and Hugh Bradford, treasurer. Delegates to the Federation of Citizens' Associations named include Dr. Emmet Williams, Sylvester, McLaurin, Mercer Sampson and Miss Julia Davis.

Citizens Unit Favors Retention by District

Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park Citizens Associations last night indorsed retention of recreational centers under the jurisdiction of the District Government.

Meeting in St. Alban's Guild Hall Wisconsin and Massachusetts ave. nw., the group also referred to committee a request to check speeding and to lift parking restrictions on Massachusetts ave. between thirty-ninth st. and Ward circle nw.

Police Group Rejects Plan For Publicist

By Jack Kearney
Post Reporter

Members of the District of Columbia Police Association ended a long factional fight last night by voting almost overwhelmingly against having a $15,000 a year public representative.

Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett took his stand with the faction against a publicist. Sergt. James G. Bach of the Fourteenth Precinct, was spokesman for the faction which fought for a paid man or woman to tell the public "the cop's side of the story."

The issue, which began to reach battle proportions about a month ago, brought more than 600 members last night to the regular monthly meeting ordinarily attended by only 75 members. The meeting was held at Odd Fellows Hall, 419 7th st. nw.

Also attending last night's meeting was Major Barrett. The meeting was closed, however, except for members of the association No official statement was issued after the meeting.

Sergeant Beach circulated a broadside a few weeks ago which, in part, said that he was 100 per cent in favor of a representative at a $10,000 salary and a $5000 expense account.

Would Contact Congress

As outlined by Sergeant Beach, the agent's duties would be to represent policemen before citizens' associations, business groups, and to "assist and advise members of our legislative committee in representing our grievances to the committees of Congress and other Government agencies . . ."

Sergeant Beach said in his pamphlet: "It would be absurd for me to say that I, alone, can do any of the things that I intend to work for. It is, however, my earnest belief, that with the proper representation at the proper places we can vastly improve our working conditions and at the same time have a Police Department that the people of this city deserve.

Sergeant Beach said that he favored the following improvements in working conditions for policemen which, presumably, would be pressed by a publicist:

1. A $1000 per year increase in salary.
2. A five-day work week.
3. Time and one half pay for overtime and court time.
4. An increase in pensions for widows and orphans.
5. A $5000 death benefit for any policeman killed in line of duty or who dies as a result of an injury received in line of duty.
6. A 20-year voluntary retirement, regardless of age.

In rebuttal, Major Barrett on November 8 had distributed a two-page mimeographed letter to association members saying:

"I am not in favor of employing a high-salaried, high pressure representative for the Policemen's Association. To do so might give the impression that we doubt the integrity and motives of the members of Congress and this would do more to defeat us than anything that has been done since about 1916 when a similar idea was carried into effect and almost wrecked the association."

Last night's vote on the issue cleared the slate for election of officers.

The elections were to have been held earlier this week.

Chevy Chase Dedicates New Center

In ceremonies last night marking more than two years' endeavor by Chevy Chase residents, the former E. V. Brown School at Connecticut ave. and McKinley st. nw. became the new Chevy Chase Community Center.

Approximately 700 persons—teen-agers to community stalwarts—attended the formal opening, and applauded as Geoffrey Thornett, secretary to the District Commissioners, turned over keys to the building to A. W. Atwood, Library Board chairman, and Harry Wender, Recreation Board chairman.

Since early 1946, through the Chevy Chase Community Council, residents had fought, first for permission to convert the abandoned school, then for congressional appropriations to do the remodeling. Finally, they raised $5400 to buy furniture and equipment.

During the dedication, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, chairman of the District Board of Education, described the center as built on "a foundation of demonstrated cooperation between private individuals and municipal government;" James E. Schwab, member of the District Recreation Board, called work of the citizens "a well concerted and consistent effort;" and Dr. Hobart M. Corning, District schools superintendent, said the results would be measured in terms of "human growth, human happiness, human contentment and human satisfaction."

Other speakers included Proctor L. Dougherty, former District commissioner; Henry Fowler and Charles Lueck, former president of the Chevy Chase Citizens Association; Edward Stafford, treasurer of the Chevy Chase Community Council; Dr. Charles W. Lowry, rector of All Saints Episcopal Church; Capt. John E. Fondahl, of the Eighth Police Precinct which takes in Chevy Chase; Harry N. Peterson, District librarian; Milo F. Christiansen, District recreation superintendent, and Sam Higger, president of the Chevy Chase Community Council, who presided.

Youth of the community was represented by David Doyle, president of the Student Council of Woodrow Wilson High School, and Robert Zupnick, president of the Student Council of Alice Deal Junior High, both expressing appreciation for the new recreation facilities.

The center, which takes in at present the first floor and basement of the old school, includes an 18,000-volume library in one wing. The rest of the center includes a lounge, canteen, meeting rooms, rumpus rooms, preschool play room, and a hobby shop.

The dedication took place on the front steps, the Metropolitan Police Band providing music. Msgr. Thomas G. Smyth of the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament and Dr. Lowry pronounced the dedicatory invocation and benediction, respectively.

'Spite' Marriage Charged in Suit Against Sailor

An annulment suit filed yesterday in District Court charged that a 28-year-old sailor married a 17-year-old girl here only to "spite" her mother.

The suit was filed by Mrs. Katherine M. Dunn in behalf of her daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth L. A. Taylor, of 1029 10th st. ne. The defendant is Richard S. Taylor, of the Navy Hydrographic Unit.

According to the complaint, the Taylors were married May 15, and spent four days in a hotel here. During that time, the complaint says, Taylor declared that he did not intend to consummate the marriage and agreed to the nuptials only to spite Mrs. Dunn, who never gave her consent to the marriage. Mrs. Dunn is represented by Attorney Al Brick.

Sleeping Car 'Cities' Again Are Planned At Inaugural

Overflow Crowds Expected to Tax Capital's Housing Facilities to Limit

Melvin D. Hildreth, general chairman of the presidential inauguration, yesterday took steps to meet the housing shortage sure to occur here during inaugural week next January.

He appointed Stephen H. Harrington as chairman of the national transportation and information committee. Harrington will work with Washington hotels on their space facilities, and will also confer with railroad companies to set up additional facilities.

Hildreth said the plan is to use the same system of "sleeping car cities" which was effective in the last inauguration, in 1941. The cars will be pulled into local yards used as "home" for Washington visitors who cannot find other accomodations.

In other moves during the day, Hildreth announced that Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Army Chief of Staff, has accepted appointment as grand marshal of the Inaugural Parade. Latest estimates are that the parade will last at least five hours, which might make the last units parade past the presidential reviewing stand in darkness.

Hildreth announced revision of earlier plans to reproduce Andrew Jackson's "Hermitage" as part of the presidential reviewing stand. He said he did so at the request of President Truman, who wants the stand to be as simple as possible.

An architect is to be designated by Slocum Kingsbury, president of the Washington Chapter, American Institute of Architects, to draw plans for the presidential stand. Plans for construction of other stands in LaFayette Square and on the Pennsylvania ave. side of the White House are to proceed as scheduled, Hildreth said.

Hildreth said he conferred yesterday by telephone with Melvyn Douglas in Hollywood and had been assured by the film actor that he would accept appointment as chairman of the committee on motion picture participation.

The general inaugural chairman said he spent most of his day yesterday pushing plans for the grandstands which are to be erected for the inaugural parade.

He estimated that 30,000 grandstand seats will be available by January 20th. Of this number, 16,000 are to be of tubular steel construction, borrowed from Griffith Stadium. Steel stands will be used elsewhere wherever possible to conserve lumber, Hildreth said.

ADD END OATH—L— ... .....

Hildreth announced yesterday that Joseph F. Major, legislative liaison representative for War Assets Administration, has been named to head arrangements for Government agency participation.

John F. Morrissey has been named executive director of grandstand ticket sales, Hildreth said. J. C. Turner is chairman of the committee on grandstand seating arrangements.

Hildreth also announced appointment of three cochairmen to head the committee on religious participation. Named were Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor of the First Baptist Church, which President Truman attends; Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle of Washington and Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld of the Washington Hebrew Congregation.

Hildreth last night spoke on Radio Station WOL, emphasizing the importance of the inaugural as a spectacle.

Georgia Alumni to Meet

Old Package Game Costs Taximan $2

Robert B. Alexander, 51, of 5208 11th st. N., Arlington, a cab driver, fell for a hoary flimflam yesterday, but conceded he had been hoaxed by an expert.

Alexander told police he was hailed at about 4 p. m. yesterday at 16th and Harvard sts. nw., by a short, stocky, well-dressed Negro, who asked if he wanted to make "an easy three dollars."

"Sure," said Alexander.

The man climbed into the cab with two well-wrapped packages. Alexander took his passenger to the residential entrance of the Mayflower Hotel.

The man left his two packages in the cab, and borrowed $2 from Alexander to pay for another package, he explained. He reappeared shortly with a third package, and asked to be driven to the Clifton Terrace Apartments, 14th and Clifton sts. nw.

He went into the apartment building. Thirty minutes later Alexander decided he wasn't coming back.

The driver told his story at police headquarters and produced the two packages left in his cab. Police opened them. One was stuffed with newspapers. The other contained a brick.

Alexander marked up a $2 deficit and the loss of an hour's time.

Wins $2000 Damages

Compton, a Clifton, Va., farmer, had previously been convicted of shooting Day near the latter's chicken house the night of June 27. In his damage suit Day asked for $10,000, claiming that the bullet wound in his right leg had prevented him from working. Compton still faces trial on a charge of stealing Day's chickens.

Man Seized in Suit Theft

A 46-year-old man was arrested yesterday by two Park policewomen who said they saw him removing a suit from a parked car, the side window of which had been forced.

The man, Robert Joseph Paul, no fixed address, was arrested by Park Policewomen Gertrude Wilson and Grace Judy, who said they saw him walk away with a suit taken from the car parked on Constitution ave. near 15th st. nw. The policewomen had been assigned to that area after reports of a number of car tampering cases.

Paul was booked on charges of petty larceny and destroying private property. Metropolitan Police reported he has a record of housebreaking and was being sought on a grand larceny charge.

2 Held in Slugging Man

Maurice J. Robinson, 47-year-old tailor, of 1835 7th st. nw. was in critical condition at Freedmen's Hospital yesterday as the two men charged with slugging and robbing him of $75 Sunday night were held in $10,000 bond by the Municipal Court for hearing November 29.

Held were Mervin Green, 23, of 602 Marion ct. nw., and Claude Wilson, 22, of 1711½ Marion ct. nw. High bond was requested by Assistant United States Attorney Robert Short because of the victim's condition.

20-Year-Olds Are 6 Months From Draft

Induction of 19 and 20-year-old District draft registrants is at least six months off, Frank D. Norton, deputy District draft head, predicted yesterday.

Norton said that about 1800 Washington men, none younger than 23, have been classified 1-A. The Army has called for 55 inductees this month, 76 next month, and 101 in January.

Drafting of 18 and 19-year-olds could be "even later than April or May," Norton said, "depending on the number of 20, 21 and 22-year-old men found acceptable for military service."

About 7500 youths of 18 and 19 have registered for the draft, according to Norton. He estimated that 5000 19-year-olds will become potential draftees annually.

The largest group of draftees so far—19 men—was inducted into the Army here yesterday.

Man Found Guilty in Krug Robbery

Edward Wallace, jr., 23, of 931 P st. nw., was convicted by a District Court jury of the $1070 burglary last November of the residence of Julius A. Krug, Secretary of the Interior.

Cash, 65 bottles of choice whisky, two watches, two pens, cuff links, studs and clothing were taken from the residentce at 1400 29th st. nw. while the Secretary was out of town, police said.

The evidence disclosed that Wallace forced a door and ransacked the home. He was apprehended after police traced part of the loot to secondhand shops.

Krug took the witness stand briefly to describe the property as his. He said that Wallace admitted the offense in his presence at Police Headquarters.

For his part, Wallace declared that he had purchased the cuff links and pens from strangers.

Under cross-examination by Assistant United States Attorney Sylvan Schwartz, Wallace declared that Krug's statements about the confession were incorrect.

The jury deliberated more than two hours before returning the verdict to Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut. Wallace was committed to jail pending a presentence investigation.

Grandmama Dietrich, Glamorous as Ever, Here to Aid French

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

AMERICA'S MOST GLAMOROUS grandma is in town. She whisked from New York, interrupting a baby-sitting spell, especially to grace the Christmas Bazaar at the French Embassy. Grandmama Dietrich, who looks a mere 25, is as doting as, if not more so, than every grandmama from northern Maine to Southern California. "I'm a grandmother, you know" is Marlene's favorite opening remark.

Should you ask what she's been up to lately, Miss Dietrich will tell you: "I've been taking care of my grandson. It's my greatest pleasure! I don't like going out nights and now I've a wonderful reason for staying home!" She makes vital statistics on John Michael Riva, the infant in question, sound extra-extraordinary. He weighs 14 pounds, has hair, no teeth. Miss Dietrich's pleased that her daughter is such a young mother, had the zip to take a Canadian vacation with her husband when John Michael was four weeks old. But, of course, the Canadian junket gave grandma an ideal opportunity to launch her new baby-sitting career.

Grandmothering aside, Marlene Dietrich is even more enchanting off screen than on. She's intelligent, friendly, so natural a lady that it seems crass even to remember her famous legs. Tall, curvaceously slim, her honey-blond hair is center parted, pinned back with two amber combs, coiled in a flat chignon. Her eyes are blue, her upper lip curved instead of lipsticked into straight line, her eyebrows delicately crescented. The Dietrich complexion is pale, fine; the sole obvious makeup accent, mascarraed eyelashes. Miss Dietrich wore a charming Dior gown with heartshaped black velvet bodice, full tulle skirt with a red, red rose tucked at her waistline, and with a single shoulder strap of pleated tulle. Her jewels were wonderful gobs of diamonds and rubies—a necklace of round diamonds, a curly pendant of pave rubies, the matching bracelet even bigger, grander. Discreetly almost hidden where the tulle shoulder strap covered bodice was a miniature medal suspended from a red ribbon—the Medal of Freedom awarded in recognition of Miss Dietrich's tireless war effort.

MRS. THAYER

Three years have dimmed the memory of what Miss Dietrich did for her adopted and very much beloved country during the war. She wanted to serve in some difficult way, parachuted behind the lines, sent on some dangerous mission. But since the Dietrich features are well known the world around, she was permitted only to entertain our GIs. Some Hollywood stars made USC trips summertimes, when overseas living was reasonably comfortable and publicity buildups were easily acquired. Marlene, however, took on the job others refused. After a North African tour during the winter of 1944, she trouped the Arctic camps for four months. She flew to Hollywood to persuade beautiful belles to trek north. They, however, were intent on hoarding their beauty. And after hearing reports that Marlene hadn't bathed or washed her hair for weeks, were skeptical on seeing her radiantly intact. During the Battle of the Bulge, she was close to capture. Our officers gallantly evacuated her first—and just in nick of time.

Touring constantly, Marlene gave up pictures—and money-making—risked everything her livelihood depended on—from voice to legs. But being only human she makes a small lament, "Does anyone care? When those who wouldn't go overseas in bad times come out in a new picture, you can believe every old GI rushes to see them!" What are Miss Dietrich's future plans? Well, back

Birmingham Mayor, Mrs. Green Honor Envoys of ERP Nations

By Marie McNair

"I'm from Alabama" was the password yesterday at the cocktail party given by Birmingham's mayor, W. Cooper Green, and Mrs. Green, to honor the foreign envoys of the Marshall Plan nations who will take part in the Birmingham four-day Christmas Festival beginning November 24.

Soft-spoken Southern accents were as thick as the cigarette smoke in the Carlton, yesterday, for with the hosts had come some of the young and pretty Southern princesses, and good-looking Carl F. Wittichen, jr., who will reign as "King Joy."

Arrives by Plane

MISS Martha Ann Ingram, chosen to be Miss Alabama, arrived by plane from school in New York, before the party was over.

Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, who inaugurated this "peace on earth" festivity last year with a dozen Latin-American beauties as emissaries, was in the receiving line with Mayor and Mrs. Green, and Mrs. Morris Bush, who's to be an official hostess for the carnival.

Mrs. Goodwin, who with the judge was to entertain at a buffet supper for the visitors later in the evening, wore a sweeping black taffeta frock, with a huge cuff collar of brown and a black changeable taffeta forming a peplum in front and a bustle with streamers at the back. Mrs. Green's gown was of navy blue crepe, worn with a halo of white ostrich tipped in pink. Mrs. Bush wore a draped gown of gold lame edged in jet beads, a black turban with paradise, and a purple orchid pinned to her shoulder.

Exotic Princesses

PRINCESSES from foreign lands who've already arrived were slim and pretty—Belka Temes of Turkey, whose deep brown eyes matched her hair; and Denmark's Bodil Ring, fair of face, with hair coiled atop her head and wearing yesterday, a black jumper frock with a white blouse.

Anne Acker, who'll be an Alabama Princess was there with her father, Steadham Acker, and her younger sister, Mildred, and found in the group, Lyle Brookover, an old family friend. The Belgian Ambassador, Baron Robert Silvercruys, came in shortly after the British Ambassador and Lady Franks had arrived.

Then there were the Netherlands Ambassador, Eelco van Kleffens, the Danish Ambassador and Mme. de Kauffmann and Mrs. Robert Lovett, wife of the Acting Secretary of State.

Maj. Gen. James D. McIntyre, from the office of the Secretary of the Air Force, gave a military flavor to the gathering with his bemedaled uniform. With him was Mrs. McIntyre.

Then I saw Charles Spruks of the State Department; Mrs. Walter Wilds, wife of the Deputy Coordinator of the State Department, with her piquant face framed in pale ivory ostrich.

Honor Guest List

HONOR guests, most of whom were there, were the Norwegian Ambassador and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne; the Swiss Minister and Mme. Bruggmann, the Swedish Ambassador and Mme. Boheman, the Luxembourg Minister and Mme. LeGallais, the French Minister, Jean Daridan, representing the Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet; the Austrian Minister and Mme. Kleinwaechter, the Greek Minister and Mme. Economou-Gouras, for the Ambassador and Mme. Dendramis.

Mrs. Lister Hill, whose husband is Senator from Alabama, was there, wearing soft gunmetal taffeta with pale blue feathers on her hat, and still others were Mrs. Edward Foley, wife of the Undersecretary of the Treasury with her mother, Mrs. R. H. Ligon, whose home is in Montgomery; Mrs. Corrin Strong, doing her duty as assisting hostess; Mrs. Preston Haskell of Alabama, who says she just came for the ride; Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, and Harry Playford, airline owner and St. Petersburg banker, with Mrs. Playford, tall and blonde, wearing black velvet and a blond mink stole.

Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Ambassador, was in the company and others included Mrs. Garret L. Schuyler, wife of Admiral Schuyler; Mrs. Charles O. Bunker, Mrs. Mason Gulick, Mrs. Conger Pratt, Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, Mrs. Virgil Peterson, Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Mrs. Mitchell Palmer.

Also, Mrs. Beverly Robinson, Mrs. Harry G. Meem, Mrs. Deborah Leighton Glassford, Mrs. Randall Hagner, Mrs. John Holliday, Miss Bertha Joseph, Mrs. Ernest Norris, Miss Eleanor Bumgartner, Mrs. Ralph Parr of Green Spring Valley, Md., and Mrs. Ceylon Boswell, of the family's American branch.

Two Young Matrons, Who Crave Companionship In Work and Play With Their Husbands, Can't Evoke Any Cordial Response Along This Line

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a close friend, Helen, who, like me, is a wife and mother; and oddly enough, we have an identical marriage problem, namely, our husbands' uncompanionable attitude toward us.

They never take us out for an evening's entertainment, are always bored with the idea of going to parties or dropping in on friends, so that we hardly ever receive invitations any more, due to endless excuses we've made in the past; and they are downright boorish if Helen's parents or mine have us to dinner or come to see us. By that I mean they hide behind or seclude themselves with a magazine or newspaper during the family visit.

Although they seem fondly proud of the children, they don't cooperate with their care; and as for handyman chores, they simply won't work with us. They may do the job but they do it alone and don't want us near. If we try to discuss problems, to reach a decision, they say, "I leave it to you."

Men Exert Themselves to Please the Public

HELEN and I belong to a club which meets one evening a week, and although our husbands encourage us to belong, they wear long faces and make griping remarks when meeting night arrives, which gives us a sick feeling as we close the door behind us. Once we are out we enjoy the evening, but sometimes wonder if it's worth it.

This isn't half the story, but perhaps it gives you the general picture, and what makes it so strange is that our husbands are sociable and affable in their business life. They have good positions, earn substantial salaries, and seem to be well liked by the public and office associates. Incidentally, they spend most of the family's clothing allowance on themselves.

In a nutshell, Helen and I would like a bit of companionship with our husbands, but can't seem to get it in work or play. Can we improve the situation or should we expect that? To me, married love means companionship, cooperation and sharing;

The Family Scrapbook

"Actions speak louder than words"—that's an old, old saying, but it is just as true today as it was when some wise person first expressed it.

One mother realized this very clearly. She had always taught her 8-year-old daughter to greet parental friends when they visited the home. So when on one occasion, Janet deliberately ignored two of mother's visitors, Mrs. Brown took her to task. Janet's explanation for her behavior set mother back on her heels. "But, mother," she said, "you never speak to any of my friends!" Only then did Mrs. Brown recognize that she often found herself so busy that she didn't stop to speak to Janet's playmates.

In our relationships with our children, we parents should always keep in mind that what we are and what we do speak much louder than what we say. Sometimes we may even shout at children to keep their voices down. Or we tell them that we never told fibs when we were children as a means of trying to keep them from handling the truth too lightly.

Holiday-Gay Furs, Fabrics

Jangoes, Ki-Wives View Fashions

A flurry of ermines and satins and other holiday-gay fabrics were paraded before members of the Ki-Wives Club yesterday during a luncheon and fashion show given at the Mayflower.

Satins, especially the jacquard weaves, were prominent in the gowns suggested for theater, tea and cocktail dates in the holiday season. Both imported and American costumes were shown, all of them from Woodward and Lothrop, which arranged the show for the wives of the Kiwanis Club members.

A Christian Dior cocktail dress of "decalcomania" satin was among the prettiest shown. A sprinkling of multicolored flowers on black satin gives the material its name.

Two of the more elegant evening cloaks were a white wool lined with ermine, and a gold metallic cloak edged with dark fur. The metallic sheen is broken by a formal all-over pattern of muted colors. Both cloaks are by Philip Mangone.

Pastel gloves and matching hats were featured with many of the costumes. Most of the after-dark dresses were 11 inches from the floor.

Prizes were awarded to guests lucky enough to pop balloons containing prize certificates. DeWitt Coffman and Martin Wiegand, Kiwanis Club members, assisted in the distribution of prizes.

Miss Pat McGerr, author of "Catch Me If You Can" soon to be published, was interviewed briefly. Mrs. Carl Werner, president of the Ki-Wives, presided over the luncheon-fashion show which was held to raise money for underprivileged children of Washington.

The Jango's proved their ability as fashion models yesterday at the Chevy Chase Club given by the Junior Army Navy Guild Organization.

The pretty service juniors modeled hat creations by Elise, shoes and bags by J. & J. Slater and ceramic jewelry by Mrs. Harry A. Rochester, an active Jango, herself.

The models were Miss Katherine Joan Hinman, Miss Pearce Butler, Mrs. William J. MacKenzie, Mrs. W. J. Durrenberger, Miss Catherine Hall, Mrs. Kenneth Brunsvold, Mrs. Charles F. Spencer and Miss Mary McNeill.

The honor guests were Mrs. Gordon Gray, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Army; Mrs. John Nicholas Brown, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. Cornelius V. Whitney, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Air Force; Mrs. Thomas B. Larkin, wife of Major General Larkin, Quartermaster General of the Army, and Mrs. Merlin O'Neill, wife of Rear Admiral O'Neill, Assistant Commandant of the Coast Guard.

Some of the other guests seen there included Mrs. McCook Knox, Mrs. Clifton B. Cates, Mrs. Lauris Norstad, Mrs. E. C. B. Danforth Mrs. Thomas H. Green and Mrs. William MacKenzie, sr.

Mrs. John H. Neill, jr., president of Jango, served in the receiving line with the honor guests. Mrs Eugene M. Zuckert, membership chairman, and Mrs. George W Hinman, jr., entertainment chairman, made all the arrangements.

Stars Augur Well for Young Prince

By Sonia Stein

THE new little English prince may not have a name yet, but his destiny is all mapped out for him. According to Carroll Righter, Hollywood astrologist who addressed the Women's National Press Club yesterday at the Willard, the prince will prove a bulwark against socialism, and "help Great Britain retain conservatism more than anyone in English history for a long time." If things don't get too far out of hand before the prince is old enough to wield power, he will probably hold the empire together, since the planetary configurations predict he will be a large landowner.

A practical man with a "financial mind," fully able to hold his own with the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the English heir will be home-loving. Although he will study the philosophies of other countries, he will return to the conservative English ideas, and is definitely not scheduled to live abroad as the past Prince of Wales now does. There is no hint of exile in the baby's planetary configurations, either.

The boy's gladular system is the one for his doctors to watch.

Of more immediate concern are the star patterns governing three of the men surrounding President Truman. If any of us have influence with Secretary of State Marshall, Righter asks that he beg him to stay on in office. Stellar influences for Marshall are so auspicious, Righter thinks it would be unfortunate for him to give up his influential position in world affairs.

Also coming into good periods after quiet periods, are Congressman Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.), and Vice President-elect Alben Barkley. However, friends of Barkley are asked by Righter to urge him to relax for the next month.

Planetary configurations indicate to Righter that the Berlin crisis is being used as a cover-up by the Russians for activities in Asia. France and Italy are not to expect much improvement this coming year, according to the astrologer, with May a particularly critical month for both.

The situation for people in general is very good right now, Righter claims, as planetary configurations haven't been this auspicious in "years and years and years." It's the time for "brass tacks activity in all practical matters"—the time to cut up property for the building of small modern houses of unusual design, for example, or the time for the United Nations to put ideas into effect, he suggests.

Stressing that astrology does not decree that you do nothing even in your unfavorable periods, Righter points out that even though President Truman's stars weren't especially good last August and September, he got in and pitched. "The stars impell, they do not compel," reassures Righter. "If it's a bad day for you astrologically, it's a good day to clean out your closets and get ready to accomplish other things when the stars are more in your favor," he says.

Astrologers are handicapped in predicting Stalin's moves because they have three birthdates for him, and cannot ascertain the correct one.

A former lawyer, Righter became a professional astrologer when the stars correctly influenced him to go to the West Coast for his health. But his interest in signs of the Zodiac is surely not inherited; his mother comes from a family where the children were not even told their birthdates as it was "not polite" to discuss such things. When Righter became an astrologer his mother said, "I have hatched a duckling."

Among those at the head table with Miss Dorothy Williams, president of the club, were Mrs. Catherine Turlington, author of "Three to Make Ready;" Rear Admiral Daniel E. Barbey of the 10th Naval Command; Mrs. Nat Luttrell, Mrs. James L. Dixon, Mrs. Randolph Miner, Miss Isabelle Story and Mrs. Elizabeth Carpenter.

First Christmas Mart in New Hall

The first Christmas bazaar to be held in the new Parish Hall of St. John's Episcopal Church, Wisconsin Avenue and Bradley Lane, Bethesda, Md., will be on Thursday, December 2, from 1 to 9 p. m.

Mrs. J. Philip Fischer, president of the Women's Guild, which is sponsoring the bazaar, has appointed Mrs. Erlund B. Cornell as general chairman. Representatives of every organization throughout the parish are working to make this a most unusual affair.

In addition to booths selling aprons, fancywork, baked goods, pickles and jellies, candy, and ice cream, there will be an herb and pottery nook, where cathedral herbs will be sold by the Mary and Martha Guild.

Tea and cakes will be served during the afternoon by Mrs. William Butler and her committee.

Dance to Benefit Scholarship Fund

The Immaculata Alumnae Association is sponsoring a dance at the Wardman Park Hotel on Friday, for the benefit of the scholarship fund of the association. Jack Morton's Orchestra will furnish the music.

Mrs. John J. Nevin has been appointed chairman of the dance by the president, Mrs. John T. Flynn.

Table reservations are being accepted by Mrs. Norman F. Jarvis at Woodley 8996. Others serving on the committee are Miss Mariana Brady, Miss Anne Marie Burke, Mrs. Raymond Curran and Miss Philomena Williams.

Bishop Oxnam Warns Against Wooing Franco

Milwaukee, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, Methodist Bishop of New York, declared today that the United States "must not flirt with Franco in order to stop Stalin."

Bishop Oxnam spoke before the fourth biennial assembly of the United Council of Church Women, consisting of women from 84 Protestant denominations.

"The unlimited ideological strength of the peoples who fought fascism must not be sacrificed for the limited strategic value of Spain, where fascism still lives in the person of Franco," Bishop Oxnam said.

The future of the United States, he said, lies with democratic and freedom-loving peoples and should be pursued through the United Nations "at all times, not just when it is to our national interest."

"We cannot expect the common man to believe our democratic pronouncements if we make deals with dictators or ally ourselves with political, economic or ecclesiastical reaction," Bishop Oxnam said. "The 'little' nations of the United Nations Assembly are watching our course with concern.

". . . the United States must keep itself so strong that Russia will be convinced that attempts to impose Communist ideology by force cannot succeed, and if attempted will jeopardize the peace; but we must make our own social order so just that attempts to undermine our freedom by infiltration will meet the inflexible will of the common people who are resolved to live in liberty.

OUTFITTERS TO GENTLEWOMEN SINCE 1903

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

AT THE Anteater's luncheon yesterday, Dr. William Mann, Washington Zoo director, introduced his guest, James M. Cain (right) to the pleasures of wild duck eating. Seated at the left is Mrs. Mann. Mr. Cain, author of "The Postman Always Rings Twice" and other novels, visited Dr. Mann to get some information on tiger cats to use in a forthcoming story

Anteaters' Feast at Zoo

Gourmets Enjoy Unusual Game

By Lucia Brown

WILD DUCK, stuffed with wild rice and basted with orange juice, was the star of the occasion yesterday when Anteaters gathered by the hundreds at the Washington Zoo.

Thus did the Anteaters—two legged type—launch a series of five wild game luncheons to be held during the fall season at the Zoo restaurant. Next week, they'll eat buffalo, and after that, bear, pheasant and venison, in the order named.

The Anteaters' Association, which includes many a prominent Washingtonian, is a club devoted solely to enjoying the fruits of rod and gun and congenial company. It was given its name, incidentally, by Dr. William Mann, Zoo director, whose predilection for ants is also shown in the title of his book, "Ant Hill Odyssey."

Formed four years ago, the club boasts no officers, no dues and no programs. And though its menus have included such strange things as green turtle steaks from the Caribbean, sturgeon and reindeer, it never had any wild ducks until yesterday's luncheon.

To find out just how you'd go about preparing a duck feast for some 500 game gourmets, we paid a visit to the Zoo kitchen at an early hour, Tuesday. The place was literally covered with wild ducks—240 of them shipped in frozen from the North country—in various stages of baking and in the midst of it all was Gordon Leech, proprietor of the Zoo restaurant.

"It took eight men three days to pick this flock," said Mr. Leech, as we sniffed the mouth-watering aroma of onions and herbs and roasting fowl. Besides being plucked, he added, they had to be "paraffined" before serving.

Job of Plucking

"YOU melt a cake of paraffin in a couple of quarts of boiling water," he explained, "then take it from the fire and dip the ducks in the solution. The paraffin, which has gathered on top, gathers on the ducks. When it cools, you pull it off along with all the pin feathers" and incidental fuzz.

In cleaning and preparing wild duck, it's very important not to douse them with a lot of water, said Mr. Leech. Just wipe them off with a damp cloth before stuffing. The dressing yesterday was made with cooked wild rice, chopped parsley, onion, celery, bread crumbs, poultry seasoning, salt and pepper.

Ducks were baked with such raw vegetables as turnips, celery, and onions in the pan with them, and every five minutes or so, they were basted with fresh orange juice. Drippings left in the pan were used as a base for gravy.

"We roasted our ducks about an hour, though a lot of epicures believe in cooking them only 20 minutes," said Mr. Leach. "Some people want the blood to run out when you cut them, but I don't think the majority of people like them that way."

Since Anteaters are renowned as good trenchermen, there was a man-sized menu to accompany yesterday's duck. First came a choice of grapefruit juice, tomato juice or wild duck broth. Next came a plate with half a duck, dressing,

About Names on Towels

Where in downtown Washington can I have children's first names machine-embroidered on turkish towels? Script or block lettering for four or five-letter names? I've tried several places to no avail, although I used to have this type of work done in Philadelphia for approximately 50 cents for a 3-inch high script name of four letters. D. J. M.

There are a number of firms listed under Embroidery in the telephone book which might be able to help you. One G st. firm, which can be reached at NA. 0492, does the kind of work you describe for about the same price you paid in Philadelphia.

Do you know any place in Washington where I can purchase radiator shields or guards to protect my curtains? I do not want regular-sized ones. I have those narrow apartment-size radiators and want a shield that is only about 4 inches wide across the top. K. P. L.

The housewares sections of several Washington department stores sell metal radiator covers which are 7 or 9 inches wide, with the length adjustable. Since these are metal, it has been suggested that perhaps they could be bent lengthwise in such a way that the extra width would extend down to back of the radiator.

Or, a complete radiator cover can be custom built to exactly fit your radiator by firms listed under "radiator covers" in the yellow pages of the phone book.

We have just bought a piece of ground with a black walnut tree on it and have picked up several of the nuts in their green husks. We spread them out to dry, but the husks seem to turn black and mouldy before drying out. Can you advise me how to dry them out successfully so that they can be removed easily from the nut? B. E.

It takes considerable time to dry black walnut husks so that they can be removed from the nuts. To dry them thoroughly, spread them out on a large flat space which is exposed to the sun most of the day. Old hands at the game spread them on a canvas or gunny sack on a sunny shed top. Spread out in this way, they can be easily gathered up and taken indoors on rainy or damp days. It may take several weeks to dry them completely, the length of time, of course, depending upon the number of low humidity sunny days. Because the husks of the walnuts readily stain everything coming in contact with them, be sure to protect your hands before working with them.

Before moving to this vicinity I always baked my own rye bread, but have not been able to find rye flour in the stores in and around Washington. Will you please help me? MRS. T.

Several of the stores along Connecticut ave. which deal in fancy groceries carry rye flour, but did not have it when I called. One store which can be reached at DI. 8250 did have some on hand when called, but it is not available all the time.

but to my husband it seems to mean kissing and lovemaking when he wants it; and at times he has actually asked me whether or not I really love him. Please state your views of the situation.

B. E.

Husbands Hunger for Romantic Love

DEAR B. E.: It seems to me that, quite accidentally, you have exposed the nub of the conflict, in explaining that your husband wants loverlike relations as the principal motif of conjugal unity, whereas you feel that considerate companionable domestic teamwork is the authentic, essentially more satisfying expression of married devotion.

And here you have stumbled on a fundamental characteristic difference between the "norm" masculine and feminine expectation of marriage,—apropos of which a wise matron of European background remarked to me recently, "All that is infantile in a man's nature comes to the fore in his lovemaking; or rather, in his desire to be physically loved by the woman he loves."

She went on to say that this aspect of a man's quest for love, in relation to the wife, seems to be sparked by unconscious hunger to find compensation for infant-coddling relinquished when weaned from the mother. Also, she believes that a wife should understand and sympathetically accept this phenomenon because in doing so she helps the man to outgrow the insecurity-feelings which motivate it, thus preparing him for the more mature pattern of companionship she prefers.

Wives Should Try Another Approach

OBVIOUSLY your husband and Helen's are rather immature fellows, as witness their striving for public popularity and Beau Brummell appearance in the business domain, while treating their wives somewhat as bossy, hard-hearted stepmothers whose unromantic engrossment with domestic and social trivia they resent.

In other words, although married, and sacrificially disposed to be fully monogamous, they haven't yet relinquished the unconscious quest for "the more perfect love" that the infant-stratum in their nature requires; and like vestal bachelors, to coin a phrase, they keep their lamps trimmed and burning in the larger world, while glooming at home because it's not sweet paradise.

All savants of human behavior are agreed that the wife is the architect of family relations, and that she must be deeply wise and gentle as a dove in molding her husband's responses to her liking. Heckling demands or fretful reproaches just don't pay dividends; so my advice to you and Helen is to take a tip from the European matron and stalk your aim from her approach.

and a baked Idaho potato, flanked by bowls of lima beans and sauerkraut. Currant jelly, celery, and olives were served, and for dessert there was a choice of pumpkin pie, frozen custard, and camembert cheese with wafers.

Getting the wild game for the luncheons is usually more of a job than preparing it, said Mr. Leech. When the club was first formed, he made a trip out West, met a lot of professional hunters and game dealers and lined up sources of supply. Today, though, he still has to search through sportsmen's magazines and write a lot of letters of inquiry before he plans a meal.

The buffalo for next Tuesday's luncheon is already here in the deep freeze. It came from the Wichita Mountain Refuge in Oklahoma, will be served as roast and steaks. One bear from Montana and three from Wisconsin are also in the freezer, as well as venison from the Adirondacks and Montana. Pheasant are due to arrive soon from South Dakota.

Island Foods Star

DELICACIES of a different type, but from even further away, were served at another luncheon we attended this week—an "Aloha Week" observance at the National Airport.

Pineapple from Lanai, Thanksgiving fowl from Oahu, and other island delicacies were gathered together for a cold buffet typical both of Hawaii and the airship meals en route to the "Paradise of the Pacific."

Included on the menu were Puaahame Maui and Tipi Oma a la Parker Ranch. The first turned out to be baked ham, and the second, roast beef.

Brilliant red "api," orange and blue Bird of Paradise blooms, and sprays of green and scarlet "ti" were flown from Hawaii to decorate the tables at the affair, a local salute to "Aloha Week."

Topical Sartre Also Craftsman

By Richard L. Coe

THE IMPRESSIVE THING about this controversial Sartre fellow is that the French intellectual knows how to write a theatrical play.

This considerable ability is exhibited once again in "Red Gloves," which is at Ford's Theater, Baltimore, this week prior to its New York opening. For all its probings of the revolutionary spirit which seethes throughout Europe, indeed the world, today, "Red Gloves" is fundamentally an effective melodrama, shrewdly constructed and ably translated by Daniel Taradash.

As a theater piece, it also offers two juicy roles which are acted to the hilt by Charles Boyer and John Dall, gentlemen highly regarded by Hollywood. Under Jed Harris' knowing direction, the play undoubtedly will repeat in this country the success it has had in Paris and London.

The story tells of a schism within the revolutionist party of "a middle European country." A well-born intellectual youth is chosen to assassinate a party chieftain suspected of compromising the party. The youth and his wife are favorably impressed, however, by the logic and skill of the corpse-designate, and the young man is made to pull the trigger only through a melodramatic device of the playwright.

After two years in jail, he is released as the Russians near the city, only to discover that the party line has changed and that the chieftain, instead of being scorned by the party, is now a martyr and that the very things he was on the verge of achieving for the party will shortly be promised by the conquering Russians.

More Than Communism

This, then, is an immensely topical play, for it might well have happened in any "Middle Europe" country. Though it never once mentions the Communist Party by name, it is the story of communism in a Europe outraged by excesses which even today permit the rich to live luxuriously, the poor to exist in uncertainty.

In short, "Red Gloves" is more than the story of a schism in the Communist Party, which undoubtedly is how the play will be loosely described once the play hits the Nation's headlines. It is a reflection of a continent's despair and of its hereditary and economic rulers, both of whom are sharply characterized in the play by a Prince and an industrial opportunist.

Sartre makes this clear in his drawing of the central character, the party leader, who says that "what yachts and money are to millionaires, ideals are to the powerless." As he plays the intricate game, the ideals of better conditions for the have-nots must be achieved slowly. His personal asceticism, his insistence on keeping himself personally free from ties make a heroic figure that is destroyed only because others are not as selfless as himself.

This tragic figure is acted with force and compassion by a Charles Boyer quite different from the suave fellow of his screen roles. It is a fine role, and Boyer's ability to dominate a stage (without his toupe) is a wonderful thing to watch. His voice is still the one which has tempted too many imitators, but in a theater it has a splendid resonance, to which he adds complete command of his body and imaginative detail in his playing.

Dall's Acting Well

Dall's role, equally important, is far more demanding, but he grasps it well. The assassin of Sartre's script is hardly dry behind the ears, and while one wonders how so important a task can be assigned to so unlikely a murderer, by the time the play closes you have seen how worthless the party members are compared to their leader; their choice of murderer and their ultimate assassination of him is their own indictment.

The young murderer's wife is the figure on whom the plot turns. Her declaration of love for the chieftain is the trick whereby the playwright restates his conviction that it is on selfish passions the human animal acts; in only exceptional cases, such as the leader's, through idealism.

This role is played by Joan Tetzel, who is faced with the inordinately difficult task of making an audience accept her dramatic declaration to the Boyer character. She didn't pull it off Monday night at Ford's, and I'll be interested to see how Director Harris finally solves this melodramatic trick.

How to Get Seats

But the director has afforded many compelling scenes in the drama, a slick Act I scene in which a pistol is hidden from the leader's henchman and a suspenseful 10 minutes in Act III when Boyer disarms the murderer among them.

But the over-all impression of the French playwright is that he's not afraid to use theatrical tools, which is more than one can say for too many writers who seem to think they are writing for the theater.

"Red Gloves" will continue throughout the week at Ford's, with matinees today and Saturday. Mrs. Stabler's ticket bureau at Lubar's, 1300 G st., may have a few seats left. Otherwise, you'd better check with Ford's before making the trip. The Baltimore theater's phone number is Saratoga 5302.

Prince Georges School Pleas Strike Snag

The Prince Georges County commissioners decided yesterday not to sign any more petitions directed to themselves indorsing school projects.

Louis Kutsch, county assessor, presented a plea from residents of the Bladensburg High School area asking the commissioners to indicate they favored "not disturbing the priority already given Bladensburg" in the proposed school building program for the county.

Bladensburg area residents pointed out that their school serves not one town, but five election districts, and that since the commissioners had signed a petition urging construction of an elementary school at Mount Rainier, they felt the same service should be given them.

Commissioner John H. Beall of Mount Rainier said that because the commissioners had signed a petition for a school, promised eight years ago, there is no reason why they should have to sign every petition for a new school brought up in the county. Two commissioners, Harry W. McNamee and Norman Collins, said they did not remember signing the first petition. They finally were convinced by Beall that they had signed.

The commissioners also emphasized they had no knowledge of any "priority list."

FWA Official Gets Beecroft Safety Award

United States Public Roads Commission for the Federal Work Agency, Thomas H. McDonald, was presented the Beecroft Memorial safety award last night by the Society of Automotive Engineers. The award was for outstanding contribution toward traffic safety.

The presentation was made by Pyke Johnson, president of the American Safety Foundation, at a dinner at the Mayflower Hotel. Paul G. Hoffman, ECA administrator, and last year's award winner was present as honor guest.

In accepting the award, Commissioner McDonald called for highways designed for a driver with a foot on the accelerator rather than the brake. Human behavior at the wheel, he said, is both "paradoxical" and "astonishing." On expressways with no police or traffic control lights such as the Pentagon network, the accident rate and average speed is lower than on nearby Lee blvd., which requires lower speeds for safety.

From numerous studies, the commissioner said, it has been shown that driver behavior becomes worse as the road becomes more inadequate to carry the traffic volume safely. As the standard of design is raised and the principal highway hazards removed, driver performance becomes more responsible and the accident rate is reduced.

Va. Tax Study Board Avoids School Levy

Richmonl, Va., Nov. 16 (AP).—The commission studying State and local revenues and expenditures steered clear today of any action that might aid the forces now seeking a hurry-up special session of the General Assembly to provide State aid to local school construction.

The study commission expressed its feelings in a resolution adopted by a divided vote in a closed session.

The resolution said, in effect, the commission did not feel it could come up with any worthwhile report "in a short time" and that it felt, on the contrary, that the General Assembly's directive required it to do a thorough and complete job and present it in a single comprehensive package.

From behind the wall of secrecy came reports that the vote was 13-3. Only one member, however, said immediately that he voted against the resolution.

That was Delegate Robert Whitehead who called upon Governor Tuck, without success, some months ago to call a special session to act on sales tax legislation to aid what he termed local school emergencies.

UEW Drops Suit Against 2 Defeated House Members

Evansville, Ind., Nov. 16 (AP).—Local 813 of the CIO United Electrical Workers announced today it will drop its $100,000 damage suit against two members of Congress. It gave the results of the recent election as its reason.

The suit, filed September 17, charged Representatives Edward Mitchell and Gerald Landis (R., Ind.) and others with conspiracy to deprive 12 union members of their right to work.

It alleged fellow workers refused to work with the 12 after they were described as Communist sympathizers at hearings conducted by the Congressmen. The House members were investigating allegations that the local was Communist-dominated.

Albert J. Eberhard, president of the local, said in a statement:

"The election result Tuesday, November 2, when both Mitchell and Landis were defeated at the polls, was the verdict of the people in this case. We accept this verdict as being a complete repudiation of the activities of both Mitchell and Landis."

Industry Says Labor Gives Too Much Rope to Umpires

By J. A. Livingston

C. CANBY BALDERSTON, dean of the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School, and George W. Taylor, onetime head of the War Labor Board and now professor of industry at Wharton, have an infant institution on their hands. It's thriving.

Last year Taylor started the Labor Relations Council at Wharton. Some 350 industrialists, labor leaders, arbitrators, mediators, professors and others paid for the privilege of helping one another discover what makes for good and bad industrial relations. This year 700 participated. If the geometrical progression persists, next year's all-day session will have to be held in the university auditorium.

Livingston

The council is not unique. Harvard, Stanford, Princeton, Michigan, Chicago hold similar get-togethers. But Taylor and Balderston have introduced a new wrinkle. They concentrate on a single subject for all-day intensive analysis. Result: Hot arguments and oftentimes a new understanding of the subject.

Consider the latest conference. It was on arbitration. Leland Hazard, vice president and general counsel of Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., and T. A. Johnstone, director of the General Motors Division of the United Automobile Workers (CIO), teed off. No two speakers could have been further apart. Their very apartness contributed to knowledge.

JOHNSTONE looks on arbitration as a further step in the collective-bargaining process. He wants wide latitude accorded the arbitrator, and declared: "In too many instances the words 'referred back to the parties without decision' stand witness to needless limitation placed upon the umpire's authority. Some of the everyday problems which have resulted in such bitterness as to cause wildcat strikes could very easily be made subject to umpire jurisdiction."

Hazard insists that arbitration is a judicial process; it is to be brought into play only after the union and the company have failed to agree on what a contract means. Thereupon, the arbitrator must settle the issue—not by conciliation or mediation, but by a clean-cut decision. Somebody must lose. Hazard feels that an arbitrator who uses "noon and evening adjournments to get the parties together ought to leave the profession."

THE CONFLICT is understandable. A corporation is an industrial organization with a clear-cut objective and hierarchy. The purpose is to produce and to make money. The worker reports to the foreman, the foreman to a supervisor, the supervisor to a director of personnel, the director of personnel to the vice president in charge of industrial relations, and finally to the president, whose word is final. Decisions can be reached quickly and precisely. No need for a kaffee-klatch every time a problem arises.

A union, however, is a political organization. It consists of a mass of human beings, each with his pet peeve, his ambition, and his capacity to make trouble. Most unions are democratic. The union leader stays in power only if he can maintain the confidence of the men in the local, only if a majority vote him in. Ditto for the president of a union. Thus, there is always a final appeal—to the ballot box.

Suppose workers suddenly decide that they ought to have work gloves supplied by the corporation. The local leader can't sh-s-s-h them off by saying: "Sorry. It's not in the contract." He must put up a fight for it and let the arbitrator decide. But management is fearful that the union will use arbitration to obtain gains not specified or contemplated in the contract. The management of the transit industry argues this.

THE TEXTBOOK example of successful arbitration is the hosiery industry. Since 1929 arbitrators have built up 2000 decisions into a common law. As a result, any new arbitrator knows the precedents both sides have lived by and can live by. He's not apt to make a decision which goes far beyond the contract. He can be trusted with latitude. Sometimes, he even decides what issues should be subject to his decision.

In hosiery, both sides know where they stand. They're not afraid of one another or of the arbitrator. Which suggests the problem in the General Motors and Pittsburgh Plate Glass setups. In those cases, the unions and the companies don't see eye to eye on what shall be arbitrated, on how much scope the arbitrator shall have. They start off in disagreement. And so they cannot make full and satisfying use of an arbitrator.

Tribunal Gets Case on ICC Bus Fare Plan

A three-judge tribunal yesterday took under advisement the question whether the Interstate Commerce Commission has power to regulate fares between points in the District and Government installations on the Virginia side of the Potomac.

Upon their decision may rest the fate of the joint-fare system. The jurists are Wilbur K. Miller of the United States Court of Appeals, and Judges Alexander Holtzoff and Edward A. Tamm of the District Court.

The court ruled last August that Capital Transit Co. must continue in the joint-fare arrangement until the case is finally decided. However, the local concern collects a 6-cent additional fare—over and above the 16-cent joint fare—and gives a receipt for the addition to passengers from the connecting Virginia lines.

If the court should decide against Capital Transit, it must return the six cents collected upon presentation of the receipts.

However, according to court evidence, only 24 per cent of the 17,000 daily riders between Washington and the Pentagon and other installations nearby are using the joint-fare plan.

The reason, the attorneys said, was that the receipt system was proving cumbersome.

Under the joint fare system, the riders must pay a total of 22 cents but receive the six cent receipt. If they pay the regular Capital Transit rate and the regular Virginia rate, it amounts to but one cent more. Of course, by use of weekly passes or tokens, the cost is reduced.

The judges questioned the attorneys for the Government, which is protesting the Capital Transit's action in resisting the joint fares, on the justice of the ICC action. The jurists pointed out that low joint fares might cause increases in the local fare rate, thus discriminating against the average Washington rider.

Trimmed Tree May Greet Truman At Blair-Lee House

A spreading Paulownia in an alleyway running alongside the Blair-Lee House may be trimmed as the result of plans by President Truman and his family to move there while the White House is being repaired.

The tree, a small genus of Chinese derivation, is behind the building occupied by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, situated at the corner of Pennsylvania ave. and Jackson pl. nw.

An official of the White House staff yesterday asked District government officials to trim the tree for "security reasons." Supt. John W. Batson of the Trees and Parking Department said he will ask the endowment officials to permit a pruning job on the tree.

The tree bears violet colored flowers during its blooming season.

Phone Union Division Again Elects Watts

Glen Watts, Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. service engineer, last night was reelected president of Division 36, Communications Workers of America (Ind.).

Watts

Watts, 28, is on leave from the telephone company. The division covers about 3500 communications workers, of which some 2100 are members of the division, he said.

Watts told about 70 division job representatives last night after his reelection at the Hamilton Hotel that he would aim at building a stronger union, with an "intensified organizing drive" as the first step.

Other officers elected were Thomas G. Archer, vice president; Leo Urbanske, secretary; Adolph Carlsen, treasurer; plant section chairman, John Hazel; plant section vice chairman, Fletcher Rawles; accounting section chairman, Margaret Reynolds; accounting section vice chairman, Rita Krause; commercial section chairman, Virginia Gomez; commercial section vice chairman, Harold Warner.

Stockholders, Workers Get New 'Melons'

Employes and stockholders of American industries received a shower of 'melons' yesterday, reflecting a profitable year.

Topping the list was a record-breaking wage dividend estimated at 13 million dollars, voted by Eastman Kodak Co. for 51,000 employes. Directors also voted a cash dividend of 50 cents on common stock and a stock dividend of one share for each 20 held. Eastman's wage dividend plan, in effect since 1912, paid $11,600,000 to employes last year.

J. I. Case Co. of Racine, Wisc., announced yesterday that bonuses ranging from 3 to 6 per cent of annual wages will be given to about 14,000 employes on December 17.

Six thousand employes of Draper Corp. of Hopedale, Mass., will be paid bonuses ranging from $30 to $75, based on seniority.

Stockholders of many corporations also shared via extra and increased dividends. Among the more notable:

G. C. Murphy Co. Declared a year-end extra dividend of 75 cents on common stock payable December 17 to stock of record December 1. A year ago an extra of 50 cents was paid.

Reason Art Metal Works Inc. Declared an extra dividend of $1.70 and a regular quarterly of 30 cents on common, both payable December 20 to stock of record December 10, bringing total 1948 payments to $3.50 against $2.25 in 1947.

Houston Oil Co. of Texas declared a dividend of $1 a share on the common, payable December 28 to stock of record December 10. This brings payments this year to $2 compared with $1 in 1947.

Youngstown Steel Door Co. declared a dividend of 25 cents plus additional disbursement of 50 cents on common shares, all to holders of record December 1.

Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co. declared a dividend of $2 payable December 10 to common stockholders of record November 26. This brings total payments for 1948 to $3.50 against $3.00 a year ago.

Beech-Nut Packing Co. declared a quarterly dividend of 40 cents and extra of 40 cents, both payable December 27 to holders of record November 29. A similar extra was paid a year ago.

Cutler-Hammer, Inc., declared a quarterly dividend of 30 cents and extra of 40 cents on common shares, both payable December 10 to holders of record November 26. This brings the total for the year to $2 against $1.75 in 1947.

American Colorlype Co. declared a quarterly dividend of 30 cents and extra of 30 cents, both payable December 15 to common shareholders of record December 1. This brings 1948 payments to $1.50 compared with $1.45 a year ago.

Newmont Mining Corp. declared a year-end dividend of 50 cents and 1/25 of a share of capital stock of Hudson Bay Mining & Smelting Co. LTD. on each share of Newmont, both payable December 15 to stock of record November 26.

N. Y. Telephone Asks Rate Hike

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 16 (AP).—The New York Telephone Co. asked the Public Service Commission today for permanent rate increases of approximately 15 per cent, and immediate temporary boosts of 10 per cent.

The company said the proposed permanent rate increases were expected to provide additional annual revenue of about 49 million dollars.

The permanent hike would increase rates for individual telephones in amounts varying by community, and would raise by 5 cents all intra-State calls now costing 20 cents or more.

The company asked the temporary increases pending a PSC decision on the higher permanent rates. It would place flat 10 per cent increases on local service charges only.

Vepco Offers New Issue on Credit Plan

By S. Oliver Goodman

A novel installment plan was launched yesterday in connection with the offering of 739,128 additional common shares of Virginia Electric & Power Co.

Present stockholders may pay for the new issue in three equal installments, starting December 1 and dated three months apart. The offering is being made to old stockholders on the basis of one new share at $14.25 for each four shares held on November 12. Rights to subscribe will expire on December 1.

Net proceeds will be used for the company's construction program, this year's outlay being estimated at 29 million dollars. Expenditure of another 80 million dollars by Vepco is contemplated for the next three years.

Giving effect to the latest stock offering, Vepco's capitalization will consist of $95,652,400 of long term debt, 289,471 shares of $5 preferred stock and 3,695,657 shares of common stock.

Underwriters are headed by Stone & Webster Securities Corp. and include the Washington firms of Folger, Nolan, Inc.; Goodwyn & Olds, Johnston, Lemon & Co. and Mackall & Coe.

Vepco stock, traded on the Washington Stock Exchange, was ex-rights yesterday with bid price $14.50 and asked $14.87½. The "rights" were quoted at 1/32 bid and 4/32 asked.

ON OIL BOARD: John Clifford Folger, partner in the Washington banking firm of Folger, Nolan & Co., has been elected to the directorate of Deep Rock Oil Corp. The latter controls a large acreage of oil lands in Southern and Middle Western States with refineries in Oklahoma. Folger also serves on the boards of several local and national corporations.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: James W. Watson, former Eastern regional manager, has been appointed assistant general sales manager of Nash Motors . . .

Watson

Fred F. Harroff has been named general manager of the lamp department of General Electric Co. . . . Chan C. Mason of Washington ranked as October sales leader among agents of Lincoln National Life Insurance Co. . . . L. W. Adams of Fairlington, Va., has been appointed brokerage manager for the Lincoln National . . . Paul W. Cleveland, Chicago investment banker, has become associated with the Newey-Ayers Organization.

AGENTS' PARLEY: More than 150 agents will attend the annual banquet meeting tonight of the District of Columbia Association of Insurance Agents in the Mayflower. They will hear John C. Stott, president of the National Association of Insurance Agents, whose topic will be "Must for the Agent." The local group, headed by C. Nelson Bean, recently changed its name from the Insurance Club of Washington. It was established 20 years ago as a group for casualty and fire insurance salesmen and company employes.

BELL ISSUE: A syndicate headed by Halsey Stuart & Co. submitted the best bid for the Northwestern Bell issue, due in 31 years and bearing a 3¼ per cent coupon. It was understood that the syndicate would reoffer the issue to the public at a price to yield 3.18 per cent, which would be the highest return on any Bell System issue in a long time. The yield was also considered indicative of the broad pressure which has been exerted for months toward a higher pattern of interest rates. Thus far, however, the short-term rate has been more responsive to this pressure.

TIP FOR TEMPTED: Lester A. Pratt, Washington certified public accountant, isn't content with merely detecting bank frauds. He also tries to avert them. His latest effort is an article in the current Collier's magazine entitled "I Catch Bank Embezzlers," in which he makes the blunt statement that "just about 100 per cent of them (bank embezzlers) get caught." Pratt should know whereof he speaks. He has conducted several thousand embezzlement investigations for the Comptroller of the Currency, for many big surety companies and for numerous individual banks.

FUR SALES SLUMP: Sales of fur coats across the country are running about 30 per cent behind a year ago, according to the Associated Fur Manufacturers. This trade association of fur coat makers says that employment in the industry is now no more than 50 per cent of a year ago. The raw fur market also reported declining prices in October. In addition to the weather and general business conditions, the fur trade also blames the 20 per cent Federal excise tax for keeping the ladies away from the stores.

EARNINGS: Pullman Inc. reported net earnings of $1,641,876 for the three months ended September 30, equal to 64 cents a common share, compared with $633,986 or 24 cents a share in the same 1947 period. Other earnings reports:

Hook to Ask Court To Deny Ferguson Seat in Congress

Former Representative Frank E. Hook of Michigan said yesterday he will ask the Michigan Supreme Court to deny Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) a seat in the Eighty-first Congres.

On the face of returns, Ferguson defeated Hook, his Democratic opponent for the Senate, in the November 2 election. But Hook said that "latest reports" from Michigan vote surveys convinced him that "it looks as though I'm in." He added that State recapitulations had trimmed Ferguson's lead.

He said he will request a court order within the next few days to restrain Michigan's Secretary of State from certifying Ferguson as the elected Senator, and provide for preservation of the ballots.

Hook did not disclose the source of his "latest reports." Incomplete but unofficial figures give Ferguson 997,702 votes to 963,328 for Hook—an apparently winning lead of 34,374—with only about 60 out of 4202 precincts still to be heard from.

Army Hopes to Inspire Composition of Note

H. P. Carter of Springfield, Va., is puzzled by the fact that the Department of the Army conducted a song contest in which entries had to be in by November 15, 1948, but winners will not be announced until Army Day, 1950.

For an explanation, I went to one of this paper's military reporters, Jack Norris. Here's the story:

The Navy has a song, the Marines have a song, the Air Corps has a song—but all the Army has is the Caisson song (artillery) and things like "You're In the Army Now." "Hardly fitting," said the brass.

So top professional song writers were asked to write something, but all their efforts flopped. Still determined to get a good song for the Army, the song contest was announced.

Deadlines for entries was set for November 15 so that five winners could be chosen by Army Day, 1949. During the year which follows, orchestras and bands will plug all five tunes, and public opinion will get a chance to pick the best of them.

By Army Day, 1950, the ultimate winner will be selected and termed the "official Army song."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Mother cat and three kittens. Cute and healthy." (Emerson 4549).

"Two blonde, female puppies, 2 months old; they're part cocker, and daughters of a pup I got through your column." (Shepherd 5773). (Editor's Note: If dogs could read, I'd have a second-generation following by now).

"Precious little part-cocker female puppy, black and white." (Randolph 8086).

"Two housebroken male kittens, 6 weeks old. A story goes with them." (Hobart 4246).

"Mother cat and four kittens; good mousers." (Randolph 6634).

AUTO DEALERS HAVE BIG BLOWOUT ON HILL

A congressional committee finds that $500 tips were paid for handing out new cars to people at the bottom of the list.

But most folks expect dealers, car or card, to dish 'em out from the top.

The committee charges that some dealers have been horsing around with the horseless carriage, under the impression perhaps that "FOB" means "Fee, Or Bonus."

The basic trouble is that the auto industry has streamlined everything except delivery schedules.

Greasing the palm of a salesman speeded up deliveries, but resulted in an annoying squeal in the customers.

Judging from the testimony, trade-ins at a fair market price have become as extinct as running boards, fenders and handthrottles.

Now we have the "automatic shift." That means that when you buy a car, you automatically shift your savings from your bank account to the dealer's.

The Nation's butchers have had their fill of jokes about getting a first trust on a T-bone steak. They're probably very happy to see somebody else's fat in the fire for a change.

In the old days when the salesman took the customer for a ride, it was in a car.

The old adage "There's many a slip between cup and lip" has now been revised to read:

"There's many a tip between the designs on the drawing board and those on the customer."

MISCELLANY

Wilson Sweeney of the Office of International Trade was talking last week to a fellow who said his firm had sent an incubator to Princess Elizabeth. "Only one incubator?" asked Sweeney. "Suppose she has twins?" The guy smiled and said: "Don't worry. It's big enough for two—it's a King-sized incubator" . . . I'm told that my supposition regarding Drew Pearson's batting average was in error. Drew told his radio audience that his children had convinced him that his strikeout on the election was so important it would have to count for more than one miss, so Pearson's batting average dropped to .777 . . . The St. Barnabus Youth Fellowship is holding a dance Friday night (St. Barnabus Hall, Oxon Hill, Md., 8 p. m., 25 cents) with the proceeds going to the Dorothy Kilmer Fund. For information call Mary Lee Messick of 117 Park blvd., Silver Hill, Md. (Hillside 3392) . . . And here are two more church bazaars: Mrs. V. H. Nash of 1206 S. George Mason dr., Arlington, Va. (Glebe 4400, extension 906) will be glad to tell you about the one being held tomorrow from 2 to 9 p.m. by the Women's Auxiliary of the Arlington Presbyterian Church, Columbia Pike and S. Lincoln st. . . . Especially about the supper, which starts at 5:30 . . . And Mrs. Louise P. Trucks of 1201 S. Barton st., Arlington, Va., is beating the publicity drums for the Trinity Episcopal Church bazaar (tomorrow and Friday, Columbia Pike and S. Wayne st.) . . . . Speaking of churches, Mrs. F. P. Cockrell (Hillside 6546) tells me that the District Heights Presbyterian Church is trying to get a play-pen for its church nursery . . . A disillusioned patron of Bowie tells me that "money can be lost in more ways than won."

NEW YORK.—Dr. Kinsey, who interviewed Tallulah Bankhead here, first tried to see her in Los Angeles, where she was playing to capacity in "Private Lives." Miss Bankhead told him: "Sorry, Dr. Kinsey, but I haven't even had time to see Louella Parsons or Hedda Hopper."

Fred Keating, whose talent and engaging manner brought him back to the Palace Theater a dozen times as a headliner, is polishing his routines now for television. Keating did some magic bits as part of this act, and the specialty which made him a headliner was his trick in making a bird and birdcage disappear. He did it at every performance for many years, until vaudeville died and many of the stars went jobless . . . In the Stork Club one day Beatrice Lillie asked him: "Have you ever killed any of your birds?" Keating shrugged: "Only when I was out of work."

"Blackbird of Rolling Ridge, II," the Angus cow owned by Oscar Hammerstein, II, gave birth to triplets a few days ago. This is its second set of triplets, and established a record . . . The Screen Publicists Guild will sign the oath under the Taft-Hartley Act, and the motion picture companies will then start negotiations . . . Just before Herbert Evatt of Australia was elected president of the UN General Assembly, one of his aides asked a diplomat "Do you think Evatt will be elected?" The diplomat said: "I hope so." Evatt's aide sighed: "I hope so, too, because if he isn't, there's going to be a brand new Australian vice consul for New Guinea—me."

Joey Adams tells of a lady who phoned the fire department and, after giving her name and address, began: "I have a lovely new garden into which I've just put 800 petunias and gladiolas." The fireman interrupted: "Where's the fire, lady?" . . . "Just a minute," she said, and continued, "The evergreen shrubs cost me $160 and—" The fireman interrupted, "Where's the fire?" . . . "The whole landscaping job, in fact, cost me $750," said the lady . . . "Where's the fire?" said the fireman . . . "Right next door," she told him, "but I don't want you clumsy firemen trampling over my garden when you arrive."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Sen. Smith Resists Maine GOP

By Drew Pearson

Maine's Senator-elect, Margaret Chase Smith, is a most attractive lady, though not given to flirtation. However, leaders of the Maine Republican machine have been flirting like mad with the first woman elected on her own to the United States Senate.

Smith

What they want is to get her out of the Senate. Apparently, Old Guardsman Owen Brewster doesn't relish the companionship of an alert and progressive lady colleague.

Maine GOP leaders made their first pass before the election. After first clearing it with Albany, they offered Senator Smith a seat in Dewey's Cabinet. The deal was that she would be replaced in the Senate by her machine-backed opponent, who lost out in the primaries, Gov. Horace Hildreth.

Mrs Smith's reply: She was flattered, but the people of Maine elected her to the Senate—not the Cabinet.

The Old Guard next sounded her out on another deal. If she would boost Hildreth for a Federal appointment, they promised to arrange with Senator Wallace White—who is retiring anyway—to retire before January. Then Governor Hildreth would appoint Mrs. Smith to the vacancy, thus giving her seniority over the newly-elected Senators for committee assignments.

But Maine's new woman Senator would make no deals of any kind—either before she entered the Senate or later.

KKK Complains

Grand Dragon Green of the Ku Klux Klan is still worried about leaks from inside his organization.

Speaking at Klavern No. 1, Atlanta, Ga., the week after election, the Grand Dragon wrung his hands and once again cautioned Klansmen to be careful about leaks.

"I have to talk frankly in these meetings," he said, "but I might as well call Drew Pearson before I come to the meeting and give him the information. For next day he gives it out to everybody from coast to coast. The AP and UP are both calling me about it next morning while I am eating breakfast."

Arrogant Tycoons

With everyone crying for steel, the tycoons of that industry have grown so arrogant they now treat Uncle Sam like a nagging customer.

As long as Congress threatened mandatory controls over steel, the steel magnates put on their best Sunday-school manners. They made patriotic promises to keep the Government supplied with its basic steel needs, but pleaded, almost on their hands and knees, to keep it on a voluntary basis.

As a result, Congress passed a law giving the steel industry voluntary allocations. To implement this, the leading producers formed an advisory committee under the Commerce Department, to pass on allocations for the industry.

Once free of the threat of enforced controls, however, the steel executives got off their knees, climbed on their high horse, and rode roughshod over Government officials.

For example, when Girard Davidson, acting Secretary of the Interior, pleaded with the industry for more steel for oil barges, storage tanks, and pipelines, the steel tycoons laughed in his face. They even vetoed extra steel for a vitally needed pipeline to the atomic energy plant at Oak Ridge, Tenn.

Commerce Department officials, too, have complained against the steel industry's pompous attitude, but the most outraged official is none other than Nebraska's Sen. Kenneth Wherry, GOP Senate whip.

Wherry Changes

No one fought more bitterly against Government controls than Wherry. But after a few brushes with the steel industry, he is ready to change his tune.

The outspoken Nebraskan has been pleading for increased production, and more steel for small business, but all he has got out of the steel industry has been a discourteous brush-off. Once, after taking up his case over the phone with a top steel executive, Wherry got so hot under the collar that he banged down the receiver.

Backed into a corner, Wherry called the steel men together before election and warned them:

"I am one who wants a free economy. No one has worked harder . . . to see that we have a free ecopomy in this country on a voluntary basis. But we have to have production now.

"And I make this prediction: If you do not get it, you are going to get something else. And it will not be a distribution under voluntary methods. It means Government controls."

It will be interesting to see whether Senator Wherry goes along with the Democrats in asking that controls on steel be reimposed.
